Chester County Farm-City Tour Orchard: Unscathed By Drought, Challenged By Floyd

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

AVONDALE (Chester Co.) — Early in the pumpkin growing season, the Rosazza family saw a good thing coming. Though the conditions were excessively droughty, the farm had enough water to keep the vines healthy and vibrant and disease pressure low.

The fall season looked promising.

Along came Hurricane Floyd. In one day, 11 inches of rain fell. The Rosazzas feared the worst: molds and rots could spoil the established five acres and five varieties of the Halloween favorite.

Tom Rosazza saw what tolls heavy rains could take on the vine plants: about a 30 percent loss in the fields, but with the balance surprisingly harvestable.

Yet the Rosazza's Glen Willow Orchards, located in the White Clay Watershed, have survived natural disasters in the past. The past growing season is behind them and it's time to press apples into cider — something they will be doing when visitors visit their orchard on Saturday, Nov. 6 as part of the Chester County Farm-City Tour, from 10 a.m.-4 p.m.

Glen Willow Orchards will be one of five sites, including a sheep farm, a dairy, and a mushroom farm, as part of the Farm-City Tour "open house."

Glen Willow Orchards, founded in 1955, was one of the Farm-City sites years ago. The family has participated several times in the event, noted Tom Rosazza.

This week the Rosazza family was busily preparing for the busiest time of the farm market season: the week before Halloween. The farm market had about five tons of pumpkins on display, arranged near the farm lane, noted Steve Rosazza.

The pumpkins are selling for about 95 cents a piece and more, or about 25 cents a pound. Pumpkins can weigh up to 150 pounds.

The farm, home to about five acres of pumpkins (including about an acre of pick your own), employs family and and additional three full-time, noted Tom. Part-time employees number about 10.

The pumpkin acres are rotated from sweet corn to control diseases and are planted the first three weeks in June. Harvest starts mid-September and continues until Halloween, Steve said.

This year the devastating effects of Hurricane Floyd have been felt not only in North Carolina, claiming huge crop and agribusiness losses, but also in Avondale. With the CATTLE: Compared to Tuesday, slaughter steers and heifers sold steady to .50 lower. The market continues to be very strong for the diminishing supplies of high Choice and Prime steers, but the severe penalty for Selects has put pressure on the average quality cattle. CATTLE: Compared to last week's closing prices, slaughter steers and heifers sold steady to .50 lower. Prices took a step back with most of the pressure coming from sharp discounts on Select cattle. The spread between Select and Choice carcass cut-out values grew to as much as 17.00 this week, as the Midwest continues to market "green" cattle (those with only limited days on feed and that are less likely to grade Choice). #1 in Rumen Availability Pennfield's Super Flaked Corn™

THE PROCESS INVOLVES

1) Cleaning the corn
2) Soaking or steeping the corn for a prescribed period of time
3) Applying steam to the corn before rolling
4) The specially conditioned corn is then rolled between 2 large rollers
5) The wet flat rolled corn is then processed by a special unit that removes the moisture and dries the finished flake back down to normal corn moisture
6) The finished product resembles a bright yellow corn flake (makes you want to get a bowl full and add milk and sugar)

WHY IS SUPER FLAKED CORN BETTER?

Flat rolled steam flaking disrupts the cellular structure of the corn kernels (gelatinization) and increases sites for microbial attachments resulting in improved starch (carbohydrate) digestion in the rumen. In simple terms, the cow uses more of the nutrients because the rumen bugs can get to them and much less corn nutrient goes out in the manure.

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

Daily National Grain Market Summary

Wheat finished slightly lower on spillover weakness from a lower Board. Good overnight export sale to Egypt but traders felt this had been factored in earlier. Cash corn bids were mixed but mostly higher with fund buying and good early week export interest major factors. Weakness, as in lower soybean bids was due to the ongoing harvest progress. Lower soybean bids were also influenced by rainfall in Brazil. Wheat 2 to 7 cents lower. Corn mixed. Sorghum steady to 3 cents higher. Soybeans 1 to 7 cents lower.

Oklahoma City Feeder Cattle

Oklahoma City, OK
Wed Oct 20, 1999

USDA-OK Dept Ag Market News
Oklahoma National Stockyards - Weekly Cattle Summary

Compared to last week: Feeder cattle steady, except steers over 825 lbs 3.00 lower. Demand good for feeders under 825 lbs. Steer and heifer calves steady to 4.00 lower, most decline under 500 lbs. Demand moderate for heavy calves destined for feedlots. Demand light for calves under 500 lbs. Farmers are not highly motivated to accumulate their light calf needs. Still no rain in the state and wheat pastures are looking bleak. Combine this with October's temperature stress on calves and you get more wait and see than actual grazing orders. Yearling quality average; calves average to attractive. Flesh conditions of yearlings medium; calves in medium to moderate flesh. Weigh-ups average to full. Slaughter cows steady to mostly 1.00 higher. Slaughter bulls steady. Packer demand moderate. Very good demand for bred cows, pairs, and grazing or feeder cows. Several sets of good quality replacement cows and pairs offered. Few lots fancy northern quality young black bred cows from reputation ranch bred to reputation black bulls established the top side of the bred cow market. Total of 1,050 cows and bulls sold with 50 percent to packers. Receipts this week 12,550; last week 11,710; last year 9,191. Supply consisted of 45 percent yearlings and calves over 600 lbs; 46 percent calves under 600 lbs; 9 percent cows and bulls. Heifers comprised 41 percent of feeder and calf supply. Prices follow with weighted average weight and price in parenthesis.

The Old Farmer's Almanac This Week With Almanac

OCTOBER 25-31, 1999

ALL HALLOWS EVE, OCT. 31.

SUMMER'S END

October 31 may seem late to New Englanders, but many of today's Halloween rituals are based on the old Celtic holiday of Samhain, which means, literally, "summer's end." The Sun God received his thanks for the preceding summer, while the lord of the dead was celebrated with a night for visiting ghosts. Lanterns and bonfires lit the way throughout the night and began the winter's custom of keeping a small fire lit throughout the cold months to help the summer's Sun find its way back in time for spring sowing.

Jack-o'-lanterns, with their fierce faces, may have originally been a device to hinder evil spirits from lingering too long or too near.

Count on dill to hinder witches from their will.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Besides pumpkins, try turnips, squashes, or gourds for making small lanterns, using small tea candles inside them.

CANDY APPLES

9 red apples
9 wooden skewers
3 cups white sugar
1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup water
red food coloring

Wash and dry apples. Remove stems and insert skewers. Combine sugar, cream of tartar, salt, and water in a deep saucepan. Add food coloring to get desired color. Place over heat and stir until sugar is dissolved. Cook rapidly without stirring to medium crack stage (290° F). Do not stir while boiling. Remove from heat and immediately dip apples. Twirl to cover, and place, stick up, onto waxed paper to harden.

Makes 9 candied apples.

The Old Farmer's Weather Proverbs

St. Jude's Day (October 28) was anciently accounted to be rainy.

On St. Jude's Day, the oxen may play.

Rain is likely to commence on the turn of the tide.

Pigeons wash before rain.

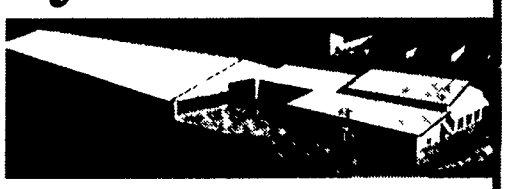
The Building you want.
The Lease you need.



Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 30 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated write-offs: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: Beginning costs as little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms start aggressively at five years but may be as long as ten, twelve, or fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules are specially designed to match your cash flow.

First: Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost.
Then: Call your Telmark representative for your financing.

OPINION

Older Farmers At Higher Risk

About 42 percent of Pennsylvania farm fatalities in 1998 involved victims age 65 or older.

Unlike their corporate counterparts, farmers routinely work beyond standard retirement age. Increased vulnerability to injury and illness should be a warning to older farmers to reduce risks in their farm work routines, said a safety expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Be careful not to try things that are beyond your capabilities," says T[illegible]urphy, professor of agricultural engineering. "Se[illegible]citizens are routinely exposed to hazards long after their urban counterparts have retired to a life of golf and cruises."

A National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health study found that workers older than age 55 accounted for about half of all farming deaths, with fatality rates 2-1/2 times higher than workers under age 55.

Two-thirds of Pennsylvania farm fatalities involving farmers older than 65 were tractor-related, with large majority involving an overturn. "Tractor overturns are the most common cause of death for older farm workers," Murphy says. "Most deaths can be prevented if the farmer operates a tractor outfitted with an approved rollover protective structure and wears a seatbelt."

Murphy recommends that older farmers have a complete physical examination at least once a year. "Be sure to have vision and hearing checked annually," he said. "It's important to know your physical limits. It's human nature to push to get a job done, but your life is more important than any job."

Murphy also says preparation helps older farmers work more safely. "Get adequate rest, eat nutritiously and wear proper work clothes and footwear," he says. "Take work breaks and always stop when you are tired."

Every farmer also should know the symptoms of heart attack and stroke. Murphy also urges farmers to check all medical prescriptions with a doctor or pharmacist to see if it is safe to operate equipment while taking them. "If your doctor says a farm activity is risky for you, please let someone else do it," he said. "Both the farmer and all family members should know what to do in an emergency situation."

Murphy cites preventative measures recommended by the National Safety Council for older farm workers.

- Equip all tractors with a rollover protective structure and operate all tractors wearing a seatbelt.
- Put gears in neutral, engage the parking brake and turn off the engine before dismounting the tractor.
- Never carry riders on tractors or equipment. Never ride on a tractor or equipment.
- Maintain all farm vehicles and wear seatbelts while operating them.
- Review operating manual before operating any equipment.
- Design animal pens, holding facilities and other buildings so workers can avoid or elude aggressive animals easily.

Now Is The Time

To Manage Frosted Corn

Appropriate management of frosted corn can help reduce yield losses and maintain the feeding value, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County agronomy agent.

Frost damage to corn will occur whenever temperatures remain below 32 degrees for 4 to 5 hours or anytime the temperature declines to 28 degrees even if only for a few minutes.

Negligible losses will occur after the grain has dried to 35 percent moisture or below, even with a severe frost. If any green leaves remain after a frost, even leaves below the ear, the corn plant will continue to mature and increase dry matter content. A good rule of thumb to remember is let frosted corn stand as long as there are some green leaves and the ear has not formed the black layer.

To Manage Frosted Soybeans

Soybeans will continue to gain in dry matter content even after the leaves begin to turn yellow, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County agronomy agent. However, after a killing frost the soybean plant stops maturing. Normally 40 days are needed between the bloom and a mature soybean. If a killing frost occurs sooner, the latter pods and beans will not mature. As with other crops, immature soybeans do not dry as well as mature beans.

Leaving the immature beans stand in the field for longer periods of time may help dry them but special care will be needed in harvesting to avoid high field losses. If a large percentage of the beans are immature, do not forget to have them checked for feeding value.

To Be Safe At Halloween

The National Safe Kids Campaign suggests the following Halloween Safety Tips. The costume should be short and snug-fitting. Baggy sleeves or billowy capes and skirts can trip children and catch fire if they brush against a candle.

Shoes should fit properly. Big, floppy shoes (clown shoes, adult shoes) that are hard to walk in may make children trip.

If a costume requires a prop like a sword or a knife, etc., it should be flexible. Rigid props can hurt children during a fall. Mask should fit properly and have eyeholes large enough to see through. A better idea is to paint the face instead of wearing a mask.

While out trick or treating, mal sure that the costumes are visib to drivers. Whenever possible, us materials which glow in the dark add reflective tape or stickers the costume. Trick or treat i groups and children under 1 should be accompanied by a adult. When crossing the stree always cross at crosswalks an intersections. Never cross betwee parked cars. Always look fir before stepping into the street.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

PASSING IT ON
October 24, 1999

Background Scripture:
Deuteronomy 6
Devotional Reading:
Deuteronomy 30:11-20

How many of you believe you gave your parents too much love? None of you, I'm sure. It is impossible to give your parents too much love. In fact, when they are gone, many of us realize that we never gave them enough love. If you have ever come to the conclusion, join the club—it's one of the biggest in the world.

One reason we rarely give our parents enough love is that we engaged with them in a lifelong struggle between dependence and independence. Many times we resisted obeying them or did so reluctantly because we were intent on being our own person. Human beings generally do not like to have to obey anyone, especially our parents who laid down the rules by which they expected us to live with them. It is upsetting to us when someone can say 'Do that' and we have to do it.

I think we have the same kind of struggle with God. He commands us and we are expected to obey those commandments. That was the basis of the relationship between God and the people of Israel. As Moses tells them, "Now this is the commandment, the statutes and ordinances which the Lord your God has commanded me to teach you, that you may do them in the land to which you are going over, to possess it" (Deut. 6:1).

4 RESPONSES

Essentially, there are usually four different responses which people make to commandments. There are those who say, "I will" and do it, and those who say, "I will," but don't. Then there are those who say "I won't" but do it anyway and those who say "I won't" and don't. At any given moment we are likely to find ourselves in one or more of those categories. This is true between children and parents and also God and his children.

Moses instructed the people of Israel to keep these commandments always in their continuing consciousness. "And these words which I command you this day shall be upon your heart; and you shall teach them diligently to your children, and shall talk of them when you si in your house, and when yo walk by the way, and when yo lie down, and when you rise. An you shall write them on the doo posts of your house and on you gates" (6:6-9). We are not aske to memorize them so that w can recite them; we are told t make them part of us so that w can live them.

This is not just a matter o God enforcing his authority ove us—even it is may sometime feel that way. God makes thes commandments because whe we live by them our lives ar blessed. The reason to obey Go is not to escape his punishment and living by the command ments is not a burden impose upon us. Rather it is a blessin to which God invites us. Live b these commandments and yo will be better off: "...be careful t do them; that it may go wel with you, and that you may mul tiply greatly, as the Lord, th God of your fathers, ha promised you, in a land flowin with milk and honey" (6:3). The commandments are always given "for our good..." (6:24).

GOD'S MIGHTY DEEDS

It would seem from the Old Testament that the relationshi God and his people began wit God's commandments, but, if w look closer, we find that there i something the comes before the commandments. "When your son asks you in time to come, 'Wha is the meaning of the testi monies and the statutes and the ordinances which the Lord ou God has commanded you?' then you shall say to your son, 'We were Pharoh's slaves in Egypt and the Lord brought us out o Egypt with a mighty hand' (6:20,21). Before the command ments of God, then, there are the mighty deeds of God. It is only after he has done great things for us that he commands us.

That is why it is so importan for us to continually pass o from one generation to anothe the accounts of what God ha done and is doing for us. That i why we need family and commu nity rituals and ceremonies t continually remind us of God' great love and grace.

And what do you do to pass i on?

FARM FORUM

Editor:

The Sunday News suggestion that breeding animals for food threatens the planet (lead story, Oct. 10) was scary with concerns, but not true.

There is far more environmental protection than the story led readers to believe. Pennsylvania has been a leader in regulation of advanced livestock farms, passing a Nutrient Management Act back in 1993.

In addition, a recent report from the Susquehanna River Basin Commission (SRBC) states from 1985 to 1997 there has been a downward trend in phosphorus concentration in the central and southern parts of the basin while downward trends in nitrogen were detected at all seven monitoring stations in the basin.

The SRBC states the decline is a result of several combined factors including agricultural best management practices.

Pennsylvania farms are not the "giant barns" housing tens of thousands of animals alluded to in the article. As our extension agent suggested, our facilities average about 2,500 head of hogs and similar animal equivalency units for cattle and poultry. And the industry prefers these smaller sizes for several reasons, including improved biosecurity and reduced risk.

Our advanced farms produce quality, safe food at a reasonable cost. Pennsylvania has been the leader in designing and implementing food safety programs for eggs and pork. The Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program has more than 98 percent of the state laying hens enrolled, which has resulted in more than a 40 percent decline in Salmonella enteritidis human outbreaks in the Northeast.

Also, our office in 1998 certified 97 and recertified 57 pork farmers in the national Pork Quality Assurance program. The certification accounted for 804,051 head of annual hog marketings in southeast Pennsylvania.

These are a few examples of how science, education, government and industry have worked together to improve the environment and insure a safe food supply.

Editor:

Just below the Lancaster Sunday News Oct. 10 front page article on farming and the environment was a story on the huge boom in building permits. This region has more registered vehicles than people and sprawl development continues to chew up farmland and open space.

This summer we had the dirtiest air we have had in a decade.

Meanwhile, advanced farms in the area designed and built with modern technology to conserve water, control runoff, and manage nutrients to meet industry, federal, and state standards. They use the latest in scientific research to make certain livestock are healthy so the food produced for our tables is safe.

This is the way farming is evolving so that we can meet consumer needs and address environmental concerns. It meets economic needs, both for the consumer and for the farmer, who now must compete in a far broader geographical area. It also is designed to produce produce more on less land.

This new way of doing business enabled many of our smaller farms to survive the summer's drought and heat because they were more diversified and reduced risk through their contracts for livestock production with advanced farm networks.

Unfortunately, the Lancaster Sunday News article failed to address these issues, which are important to public understanding and have significant consequences for our efforts in farmland preservation and food production.

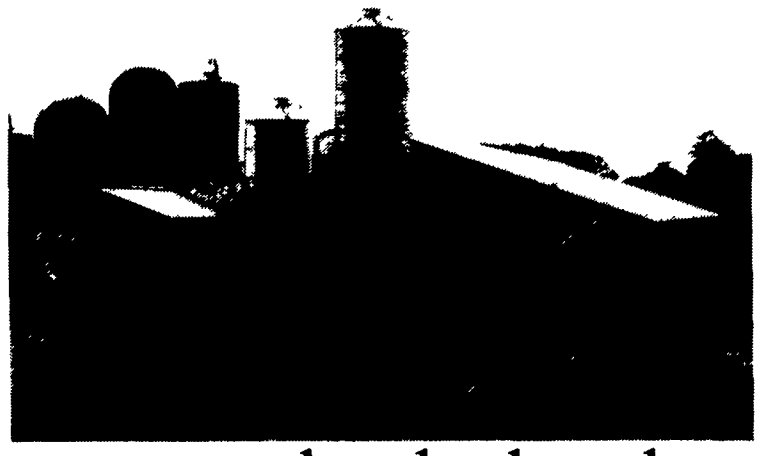
If you're planning to get bigger...



...we can lend a hand. And some cash.

Before you turn over the first shovelful of dirt for an expansion project, I hope you'll put pencil to paper to figure out how it's going to benefit your farm business. And when you get to the financing part of your planning process, I hope you'll give me a call. At ENB, we've been helping farmers grow their businesses for the past 117 years.

Dairylea Cooperative Reviews Year Of Accomplishments

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Dairylea Cooperative Inc.'s accomplishments for fiscal year 1999 will enhance the performance and strength of the organization and its members well into the next century, reported President Clyde E. Rutherford at the cooperative's annual meeting Oct. 12-13 at the Holiday Inn in Liverpool, N.Y.

During his presentation, Rutherford noted that although the new millennium will usher in many changes and challenges, it will also provide many equally important opportunities for the cooperative, its members, and the dairy industry as a whole.

"The cooperative strives to provide value to its members by being financially sound, paying members a highly competitive price for their milk, providing programs and services that have a positive impact on members' bottom line, and being an advocate for farmers on legislative matters," he said.

More than 800 Dairylea members and industry guests attended the two-day meeting.

Profits for fiscal year 1999 totaled $630,000, stated Rutherford. Dairylea marketed 10 percent more milk than last year – totalling 5.3 billion pounds. The cooperative's milk sales increased to approximately $881 million. Premiums paid to members translating into an average 46 cents on a hundredweight basis.

Additionally, Rutherford reported that most of the cooperative's existing programs and services for members were upgraded, expanded and enhanced in 1999.

"The most important advantage of membership in Dairylea is having access to a wide variety of resources through our holding company, Agri-Services, LLC. Members are provided with a multitude of innovative programs and services that gives them a competitive edge and improved quality of life," he said.

Of special note, Rutherford announced a new comprehensive estate planning program, Agri-Secure, offered by Dairylea through Elwyn Voss and Associates.

Rutherford reiterated the cooperative's commitment to increasing its members profitability and has taken a leading role in representing dairy farmer's interests on national and region pricing issues.

During his presentation to members and industry leaders, Chief Executive Officer Rick Smith provided details on Dairy Marketing Services, LLC (DMS), the new entity created out of a joint venture with Dairy Farmers of America. DMS is the largest marketer of milk in the Northeast, selling close to 10 billion pounds of raw milk annually. The milk is provided by more than 6,000 dairy producers located throughout New England, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware and West Virginia. DMS is supplying the milk requirements of 90 processors and manufacturers in the region.

New England 4-H'ers Travel To Big E To Compete In Dairy Shows

WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — About 200 4-H'ers came from around New England to compete against one another in dairy competitions that included dairy shows, quiz bowls, fitting contests, and showmanship, here at the 1999 Big E.

The first few days of the fair are devoted to youth competitions that culminated with the showmanship classes.

In the Ayrshire breed, Jeanie Graffam of Falmouth, Maine, captured the grand champion award, and Zachary Woodis of Spencer, Mass. took home reserve.

Maine won the Ayrshire state herd contest.

Seth Conway of Jefferson, N.H., took home the Brown Swiss grand champion trophy, and Brian Whitlow, of Warren Conn. won reserve. The Brown Swiss State Herd blue ribbon went to New Hampshire's entry.

Vermont's Misty Koloski won the Guernsey grand champion award, and Emily Everett of Williamsburg, Mass., was awarded reserve. Vermont's entry in the state herd class won first place.

In the Holstein show, Natalie Keene's 2-year-old heifer won the grand champion for the breed. She is from Auburn, Maine. Peter Erb of Landaff, N.H., took home the reserve grand champion honors. Keene's animal was a member of Maine's first-place state herd.

The grand champion in the Jersey show was owned by Lindsi Shaw of Orwell, Vt. Reserve was given to Kristin Lilly of Gill, Mass. New Hampshire won the state herd class.

Shannon Walker of East Randolph, Vt. took home the grand champion honors and New Hampshire's Shawna Stark won reserve. New Hampshire also claimed the state herd trophy.

Farm Relief Package Provides Some Assistance

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The farm relief package approved by Congress will provide badly needed assistance to the nation's hard-pressed farmers and ranchers, the National Farmers Union (NFU) said recently.

The $8.7 billion package, passed by the Senate and the House, includes about $5.5 billion in direct payments to offset low prices and $1.2 billion in disaster assistance. It also includes $475 million for oilseed producers, $200 million for livestock producers, $125 million for dairy farmers, funding for the cotton Step 2 program and relief for tobacco, peanut, and sugar growers.

The package also extends the dairy support price for another year.

"We are pleased Congress has taken steps to help alleviate the financial stress felt by the country's farmers and ranchers. The assistance will give many producers a temporary economic reprieve as they make decisions about next year," said NFU President Leland Swenson. "However, while this package is certainly welcome, it is far from ideal."

NFU led the charge for farm assistance and helped build support among national farm groups by organizing a national agricultural summit in April and worked closely with the 28 farm groups that attended to present a united front to Congress.

NFU is pleased the package for the first time attempts to address mandatory price reporting, one of the organization's top priorities for several years. NFU said that while the price reporting measure is not perfect, it is a step in the right direction.

Because of other shortfalls in the bill, NFU also is urging Congress to immediately begin work on action to fully address long-term and disaster needs in agriculture.

"Lawmakers should waste no time in rolling up their sleeves and getting to work today on a supplemental bill for additional disaster relief. Congress should also take this opportunity to make constructive changes to the farm program now so we don't find ourselves here again next year," Swenson stated.

NFU would like to see Congress put in place a counter-cyclical farm safety net to help producers when prices fall and to give them the tools to generate more revenue from the market, not from government programs.

Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania: A New Dairy Organizations Meets Changing Needs

Bill Heald
Penn State

In today's dairy business climate, the pace of change is rapid. Volatile prices and shrinking margins continually pressure producers to hone their business skills.

Farming has become very complex and interdependent on many non-farm factors. The mental models of a generation ago or just a decade ago can no long assure success in the dairy industry.

In Pennsylvania, a group of professional dairy producers has organized to meet the challenge of gaining greater efficiency by sharing practical solutions to contemporary challenges. An outgrowth of the Pennsylvania Dairy Industry Future Committee's first dairy forum in 1994, the Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania (PDMP) have evolved into a revitalized group of dairy producers who are poised to become a powerful force in Pennsylvania's dairy landscape.

A newly revised vision statement identifies the group's goals: "Progressive dairy producers joining together to promote the well being of their businesses, families and communities." Members explain that they are dairy business managers who like socializing with positive dairy thinkers and that they have a great desire to learn the latest techniques that make dairy farming more profitable, the work easier, or improves their lifestyle or community.

Members are not defined by herd size, with herds ranging from 60-2,000 cows, or by region within the state. They are defined by attitude and learning styles. Some quotes from members include:

- "I learn a lot from the membership — new ideas and ways to do business."
- "I was drawn to the interaction of the progressive membership — opportunities to see other successful operations."
- "The educational opportunities for me and my employees are great."
- "Dairy producer numbers are shrinking — we need to meet others like us."

This fall the PDMP is visiting dairy farms in Idaho from Oct. 26-29. In the past they have toured dairy farms in New York, Maryland, Virginia, and Vermont, gaining insight into operations in those states.

Topics at some of their meetings have included farm waste management, manure handling and application, bunker silos and feed bunk management, milk marketing, labor management and the use of computers, especially Internet access. PDMP now has its own listserv for membership communication.

Routine organization matters are handled informally by an executive committee, currently comprised of Tom Frey, Frey Dairy, Inc.; Walt Moore, Walmoore Holsteins, Inc.; Dan Mains, Mains Dairy, Inc.; and Dennis Peckman, Slate Ridge Dairy Farm, Inc. The executive committee meets monthly. The schedule of meetings includes the fall tour, a winter educational meeting, a summer meeting at a member's farm, and some additional workshops for special interest groups or employees.

As the PDMP investigated ways to meet the needs of their members and foster growth, serving more dairy producers across Pennsylvania and the region, a committee of eight met this summer at the Penn State Team Decision Center and developed a strategic plan for the organization. The Department of Dairy and Animal Science, in partnership with Management Development at Penn State, facilitated the planning session and agreed to assist PDMP make the plan a reality.

In August, the executive committee met with Dean Robert Steele to update him on their changing objective, seeking support from the College of Agricultural Sciences, which was readily given.

Staying abreast of information and developing new skills is a critical and growing task of the modern dairy manager. No farm can make it alone; managers need to interact with a network of new neighbors, multiple advisers, other businesses, policymakers, researchers, new service providers and distant successful dairy producers.

Members of PDMP are optimistic about the future, and are confident that by sharing technology, business concepts, and practical solutions to common challenges, they will be able to compete successfully as business people in a very complex environment.

PDMP is looking for new positive-thinking progressive dairy producers willing to teach and learn from other members to improve their own businesses and the industry as a whole. For more information about PDMP, direct your inquiries to the author at CWH3@psu.edu or call (814)863-3918.

heavy rains, which don't drain well because of the heavy loam soils, "fungus moves in, causing rots," said Steve. "It's not a factor as much in well-drained soils. I have heavier soils here."

As a result, "rotation is crucial for pumpkins," Steve said. Rotation is back to soybeans and field corn.

At planting, balanced fertilizer is applied. Topdressing occurs at last cultivation.

Steve noted the favorite varieties include those that provide a range, from carving to baking, in a wide variety of sizes to suit customer needs. A broad spectrum of sizes, he noted, is crucial to success of the farm market.

Tom's brother Ralph Rosazza runs the greenhouse business. Another brother, Dick, helps run the orchard. Steve, Tom's son, runs the vegetable crops on the 109-acre farm. Steve has help from his cousin, Ron, Ralph's son.

Steve said the farm grows 25 acres of sweet corn. They don't grow strawberries but they do plant cantaloupe, watermelon, tomatoes, peppers, and lots of cool- and warm-season vegetables.

After Clarence and Louisa Rosazza began a small greenhouse in Avondale in the 1930s, the family purchased a farm on Glen Willow Road, where it is now located. The Rosazza's — several of who work in the farm market — now farm about 162 acres, Tom, son of Clarence, noted.

Then, about 30 acres were devoted to the apple orchard. The rest was in hay for the horse and mushroom industries. The farm also grows about 10 acres of peaches, mostly sold retail.

The orchard is open seven days a week, almost year-round. The farm market is closed at the end of June until about mid-July. Customers come from all over, Tom noted — about a 20-mile radius in the Avondale area. Saturday is the busiest day of the week now until Christmas.

The "highlight" crop at the farm are the apples. "They are, by far, our best seller," said Tom. More than 20 varieties of apples are on sale, including early varieties Ginger Gold, available in August, and the latest varieties, Granny Smiths and Yorks. Here Tom holds a basket of Red Delicious.

The orchard is home to about 10 acres of peaches in 12 varieties, harvested in early August through Sept. 23 this year, Tom noted. Steve checks out Crest Haven peaches on the hill overlooking the farm.

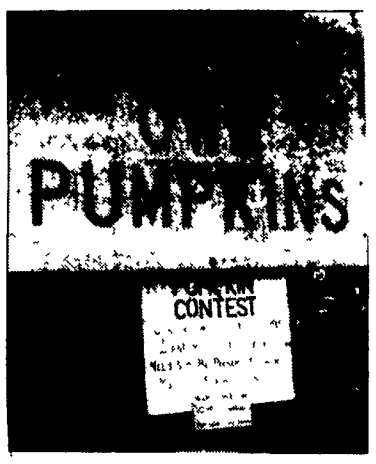
According to Steve, Glen Willow Orchards has encountered its busiest time of the season. "From now until 10 days before Halloween," he said. "And the month of August with peaches."

The farm is home to about 10 acres of peaches in 12 varieties, harvested in early August through Sept. 23 this year, Tom noted.

They also sell early and late-season flowers.

The cider mill operates a couple of times per week. Tom noted the orchard presses about 15,000-20,000 gallons per season.



The farm, home to about five acres of pumpkins (including about an acre of pick your own), advertises this pumpkin contest.

Pressing cider requires a blend of all varieties to make good juice, said Steve.

"There are no secrets to making cider," Tom said. "All the varieties are going to be in there, including Red Delicious and Golden Delicious."

The farm doesn't pasteurize the cider, which requires expensive equipment. "We can't afford it," said Tom.

About 500 customers will visit on the busiest day of the week, Saturday until Christmas. But Tom noted that they sell hand-made wreaths and Christmas trees supplied by other farms.

Steve noted the huge challenges include the "growing conditions Mother Nature doles out that we have no control over." But what he appreciates about the work is the amount of joy people receive in picking their favorite pumpkins from a one-acre field near the farm lane.

The Chester County Farm-City self-guided tour is from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. The orchard is located at Glen Willow Road at Rt. 41, just north of Avondale (look for the farm sign).

Other sites for the tour include:

• Hershey Dairy Farm, Duane and Marilyn Hershey. The farm is home for a milking herd of 100 registered Holstein cows and 150 heifers and calves. Each cow averages 85 pounds of milk per day. The 1989 Dairy of Distinction grows corn, alfalfa, wheat, and soybeans on Hershey's 170 acres and 330 rented acres. The crops provide food for the cows, milked twice daily in a 67-stall stanchion barn. Visitors are invited to watch the afternoon milking, cow, and calf feeding at 4 p.m. on the tour. The farm is located at Highpoint Road at Rt. 41 south of Cochranville.

• Menhennett Sheep Farm. The 96-acre farm in West Fallowfield Township bordering the Octorara Creek includes a flock of 100 registered Shropshires and produces milk for a variety of cheeses. Annette Menhennett and Lee Cook are partners in this farm operation. The farm is located west on Steelville Road at Rt. 41 north of Cochranville.

Question: We feed a single-ration TMR to all of our milk cows. Is it important that we feed all the same ingredients in our steam-up ration that we do for the milking herd?

There is no distinctive yes or no to this question. A little common sense can go a long way in developing a good feeding strategy for this unique group of cows.

The first thing to remember is what we are trying to accomplish during this period of the cow's life. During the preceding lactation we took a forage and grain digester and made her into a heavy forage digester for her far-off dry period. This means that during the end of the lactation period your cows are consuming the same diet but at a much lower level of intake.

Let us suppose these tail-enders are eating about 37 to 40 pounds of dry matter. The grain-to-forage ratio is at 55:45. That means that at dry off, these cows are consuming 20 to 22 pounds of grain on a dry-matter basis. Most of the time that these cows are dry we will feed them a diet that will contain 5 to 6 pounds of grain and the remaining 22 to 24 pounds of intake will be forage. Looking at dry matter, this will figure to be about 20:80 gain to forage diet.

My preference is to use this minimal amount of grain for dry cows. We need this to maintain a rumen environment that can digest increasing amounts of grain in the next lactation. This abrupt change in diet is also necessary to force good cows into their dry phase.

Now let's look at the other end of the dry period and the changes that need to take place for the high-producing dairy cows today. This simple concept is just a reversal of putting her dry. We all know that increasing energy intake anytime requires a bit more planning and patience on our part. With this in mind we can put together a steam-up, prefresh, or transition diet to add energy and other nutrients that will be necessary for our cows to stay healthy as they calve. This diet should be somewhat of an in-between step from an energy standpoint. This means that when the milk cow diet calls for energy levels of .78 meal NEI and the dry cow diet is at .65 meal NEI, we should set a target value for energy somewhere in the middle of the two. A prefresh diet that is formulated for .71 meal NEI will necessitate increasing grain levels and decreasing forage. It would be common to see the 20 percent grain portion of the diet increase to 35 percent to 40 percent during this time.

Feeding the same forages during the prefresh period always seems like a good idea. Corn silage and haylage can be used effectively when care is taken concerning cation-anion balance. Haylage, particularly legumes, can often be very high in postassium and care needs to be taken when using these in the transition diet.

Protein levels should be a bit higher than 12 percent to 13 percent dry cow diet – 14 percent to 15 percent crude protein should do the job. I do not like protein levels to be higher than this even for the first calf heifers in the transition phase. Higher protein levels seem to induce calving difficulties because of larger-than-expected calves. As more research is done, we may be able to reduce the protein that is fed even more by meeting the needs of specific amino acids. One tool that could serve as a check when protein levels are suspected of causing difficulties is BUN. Blood urea nitrogen, like its milk counterpart MUN, can tell us about protein usage efficiency. You should check with your vet regarding such a tool.

Energy content of the close-up cow should be monitored. Large calves can also be produced when excessive levels are fed. The best choice for energy contribution in this diet should be a combination of good quality forage, appropriate grains, or by-products used in the milk cow diet. One exception should be noted: feeding fat sources are questionable during this time. Whether it is whole oil-seeds, tallow, or some by-pass type fat, these feed ingredients are usually harder to digest and may even reduce intakes. It is usually easy enough to meet the energy requirements of this group with less costly and more traditional sources such as sugars, starches, and digestible fibers. If you find this untrue, you should look at the forages you selected for this group.

The one aspect that makes feeding the transitional cow difficult that is of dry matter intakes. The natural tendency with these cows is to reduce eating. If for no other reason, the physical restriction by the growing unborn calf can cause a major reduction of intakes. We may want to look to supplement trace vitamins and minerals as we predict DMI to decrease by as much as 20 percent during the last week or so before calving. To minimize this drop we can use molasses to enhance the flavor and appetite.

I spent time in the last three articles answering concerns about these transitional cows. I urge everyone to stop ignoring this group. This is truly one place where a little "TLC" can produce some big results.

Meat Judging Team Prepares For National Competition

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Spending several hours weekly in a meat cooler isn't a choice most teen-agers select, but that's exactly what four Lancaster County sophomores have been doing for the last six months.

The meat cooler is an educational experience for Derick Bollinger, Ryan Donough, Radell Peters, and Jimmy Zimmerman. They know more about types of retail cuts, the part of the carcass the cut is from, and the cooking method recommended for that cut than most consumers.

The four teen-agers knowledge has enabled them to become champions at the county, regional, and state levels. Now, they're headed for national competition at the American Royal National 4-H meats Judging Contest at Kansas State University in Manhattan, Kan. the first week in November.

The Lancaster County Meat Judging Team is part of the 4-H program. They are the same team members who won first place last year at state competition, but they were too young to qualify for nationals.

This year the team is well groomed to recognize muscling, trimness, and quality beef and the leaness in a pork cut.

"In a contest, we must identify 30 cuts at one time. Sometimes it's hard to distinguish between different cuts," Bollinger said.

The contest will required team members to view carcasses and give oral reasons for their judging decisions.

Jeff Craig, Little Britain, is the coach for the team. Craig was a former member of the team himself. Since college graduation, Craig has coached the team off and on for about nine years.

He said, "I got a lot out of 4- H, and that's why I put time back into it."

Craig is a meat technician for Stoltzfus Meats, Intercourse, where weekly practices are held.

This is the fourth time Craig will take a team to national competition.

Ryan Donough, 16, son of Ed and LaRue, Manheim, and member of the Manheim FFA, was top scorer at the state level. Teammate Radell Peters, son of Raymond and Becky, Elizabethtown, placed second. And Derick Bollinger, 15, son of Eugene and Carol Bollinger, Manheim, placed third. Rounding out the team effort is Jimmy Zimmerman, 15, son of Jay and JoAnn Zimmerman, Reinholds, and Ephrata High School student.

The four share other common interests. They all show sheep. They are all tenth graders.

Derick said that he decided to join the meats judging team because both his older sisters did. He often tagged along to practices when his sister Amy was on the team.

By osmosis, Dereck soaked up the information and thought he could do a good job identifying cuts of beef, pork, lamb.

Craig said that during his years of involvement in meat judging, the emphasis has changed along with the meat industry.

"Today there is more emphasis on trimness, especially in pork. Also many cuts have changed," Craig said.

The team members can distinguish between pork tenderloin and loin chops. They can tell at a glance the amount of marbeling required to produce a tasty steak.

The students will miss four school days for the national event. In addition to travel time, one day will be filled with practice sessions, another day will spent in contest competition, and the following day, the team will do some sightseeing.

Team members raised the money needed by donating animals to be auctioned at local fairs.

"I'm pretty confident we will do well," Ryan said of the upcoming competition.

His coach isn't quite as confident. This will be Craig's fourth year in taking a team to national competition, and he knows that many of the teams from other states will be thoroughly prepared.

"It's tough competition out there," Craig said of the 30 to 40 teams that will be competing for the national title. "Our team's strength is in retail identification."

If the team does not win the national title, they do not have another chance.

"If you win at the state level, you cannot join the team the next year," Craig said.

However scholarships will be awarded to top scoring individuals.

"Meat judging gives kids confidence and knowledge of the meat industry. But we don't produce a lot of butchers out of this," Craig said.

"This knowledge will definitely help them as consumers. They will be able to pick out the best cut of meat," Craig said.

Boar Sale Posts Results

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Meat Animal Evaluation Center has announced the results of the 24th Performance Tested Boar Sale, conducted here at the Penn State Ag Arena Aug. 18 during Penn State's Ag Progress Days.

Samuel Hayes Jr., state secretary of agriculture, was on hand to address the crowd and reaffirm the department's commitment to the improvement of the Meat Animal Evaluation Center and its programs.

The sale started with the top-indexing pen of boars by Penn State. A new record of $3,000 was offered by Commercial Concepts, Needmore. That bid entitled Commercial Concepts to its pick of the top-indexing pen. The company chose the lot #1 boar, the top-indexing boar this year. The remaining boar in that pen sold for $500.

The second highest price of the day was $600, offered by Kenneth Jones for his pick of the second highest indexing pen of boars. This pen of Yorks was owned by Twin Maples Farm. The 14 Yorkshire boars in the sale sold for an average price of $595.

Three durocs averaged $383. The top-selling Duroc was consigned by Twin Maples Farm and was purchased by Henry Johnson, Jr. of Selbyville, Del. for $450. Two Landrace boars were consigned by Billig Farms and sold for an average of $350. The top-selling boar in this pen sold to Mary Stetter for $400.

National Organic Standards Board To Meet Oct. 25-28

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Organic Standards Board (NOSB) will meet Oct. 25-28 in USDA's South Building, 1400 Independence Avenue, SW, Room 3501-S, Washington, D.C.

Meetings will run from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. Oct. 25 and from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Oct. 26-28. All meetings are open to the public.

"This meeting is being held to hear committee reports and make recommendations on whether 16 materials will be included on the proposed National List," said Kathleen Merrigan, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service. "The 16 materials are being considered for use in organic crop and livestock production and processing."

The NOSB, which grew out of the Organic Foods Production Act of 1990, met for the first time in March 1992. It has six committees, which address issues related to crop standards, processing, labeling and packaging, livestock standards, accreditation, materials, and international issues.

On Dec. 16, 1997, USDA published its proposed rule for the National Organic Program in the Federal Register. The period for public comment on the proposed rule was extended through April 30, 1998, and resulted in an outpouring of 275,000 comments.

Time has been scheduled for public input on Oct. 25, from 1:15 p.m. to 5 p.m. For more information, call (202) 720-3252.

* Place the machine on a rug Lie on your back and put your ankles in the grooves of the footrest on top of the machine
* Set the timer switch to activate the machine for the number of minutes you desire First time users should start with 2-5 minutes
* The footrest will begin to move back and forth, carrying your feet briskly from side to side This movement will carry up through your legs and torso, throughout your entire body, causing you to wiggle back and forth - that's right like a fish swimming in water
* All you do now is relax and breathe deeply, letting the machine rock you gently but firmly for a maximum of 15 minutes
* When the time is up and the machine stops, remain lying down for another two to five minutes, relaxing and breathing deeply, enjoying the remarkable afterglow - chi - as it moves throughout your body

"In two months of using the Chi Machine, my thighs, hips, stomach and buttocks now look as good as they did when I was in my 20's - and I'm almost 52"

Agriculture Department Observes World Food Day

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. recently joined representatives of state and community-based emergency feeding organizations to observe World Food Day at the state capitol.

"Hunger is not acceptable in Pennsylvania and this country," Hayes said. "We are gathered here today to pledge our continued efforts and urge all Pennsylvanians to help eliminate hunger and malnutrition."

This year's theme is "A World Without Hunger."

Secretary Hayes noted that Pennsylvania, through the Agriculture Department, is a national leader in providing emergency food assistance to needy Pennsylvanians. In 1999-2000, the Agriculture Department provided $14.46 million in cash grants to counties to purchase and distribute food through the State Food Purchase Program. In addition, since July 1, 1998, the Emergency Food Assistance Development Program has provided $5 million in state funds to counties to enhance and strengthen emergency food assistance networks.

Hayes recognized individuals from emergency food agencies across Pennsylvania who have volunteered their time to work in food banks, soup kitchens, and other programs to help those in need.

Hayes also presented awards to student winners of a statewide poster contest who submitted posters under the theme "A World Without Hunger." The first-place winner in the elementary school category was Julie Dlugos, an eighth-grade student at Christ the Divine Teacher School in Latrobe, Westmoreland County. Sam Michlovitz, eighth-grade student at Susquehanna Middle School, Harrisburg, Dauphin County, was named the winner in the junior high school division, and Meredith Yanchak, Chartiers Houston High School, Houston, Washington County, was the winner of the high school division. First-place winners each receive a $100 U.S. Savings Bond for their efforts.

No. 4 Weighted Average Price $15.44

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Middle Atlantic Order Acting Market Administrator David Z. Walker announced a September 1999 weighted average milk price of $15.44 per hundredweight.

The weighted average differential price was - $.90 per hundredweight and the producer nonfat milk solids (NFMS) price was $1.32 per pound. The weighted average price was up $1.76 from August but was $1.33 lower than a year earlier.

The producer NFMS price was up 90 cents from last September. The nonfat milk solids price, applicable to handler payments, was $1.3290 per pound for the month, up 90.31 cents from last year. The gross value of September producer milk, adjusted to 3.5 percent butterfat was $72.9 million, compared to $78.2 million a year ago.

Walker said that producer receipts totaled 474.1 million pounds during September, an increase of 3.3 million pounds from last September and the average daily delivery of 3,262 pounds per producer decreased 85 pounds or 2.5 percent from a year earlier. An estimated 35 million pounds of milk was voluntarily withheld from the pool during the month of September. Had this milk been pooled, total producer receipts would have increased 38.3 million pounds, or 8.1 percent, from September 1998.

A total of 4,884 producers supplied Order 4 handlers during the month, an increase of 155 from a year ago. Class I producer milk totaled 257.8 million pounds and was up 21.4 million pounds, or 9.1 percent, from last September. Class I milk accounted for 54 39 percent of total producer receipts during the month compared with 50.22 percent in September 1998.

The average NFMS test of producer milk was 8.66 percent, up from 8.62 percent the previous year. The average butterfat test of producer milk was 3 66 percent, up from 3 59 percent last September

Pumpkin Vermont Spice Cake

Passion FOR Pumpkin

When the colonists landed in North America, they found the Native Americans growing and eating pumpkins. Pilgrims would scoop out a pumpkin, fill it with milk and pumpkin flesh and cook it for hours in hot ashes—often adding spices and syrup to make pudding. Early American cooks soon found all kinds of other culinary uses for pumpkin. It still remains a staple in America's kitchens to this day.

Convenient canned 100% pure pumpkin is a versatile ingredient in soups, custards, sauces, even main dish stews. But it's pumpkin pies, cakes, cookies, muffins and breads that top the list of favorite treats you can make with this gourd-like fruit. In addition to adding rich flavor, pumpkin helps keep these baked goods moist. These recipes are from the Libby's Pumpkin Test Kitchens.

Pumpkin Potpourri

- Pumpkin has less than one gram of fat per 1/2 cup serving, and it's a great source of beta-carotene and dietary fiber.
- The first American cookbook, written by Amelia Simmons and published in 1796, carried a recipe for pumpkin pie.
- Commercial Pumpkin Pie Spice, a timesaving alternative to measuring individual spices, is a ground blend of cinnamon, ginger, nutmeg and allspice.
- Pumpkins' closest relatives are other "fruits of the vine"—cucumbers, melons and various squashes.
- Although often treated as vegetables, pumpkins are technically fruit.
- Libby's has always been the major producer of canned pumpkin—planting approximately 4,000 acres of pumpkin each year. The crop is used to create more than 50 million pies, as well as delicious baked goods year-round.
- Unlike the average jack-o'-lantern variety, the Company uses select seeds from a strain of Dickinson pumpkin which produces a meatier and sweeter pumpkin than that found at the local market.

"What are you doing, guys?"

Just beyond my feet was a sizeable, freshly-dug hole, the dark color of the damp ground in contrast to the deep green grass, now rejuvenated following a blessed return of rain to our region.

Working the fresh hole in the ground were a skidloader and an excavator, earthmoving equipment efficiently prodding the rich soil. For what?

"I'm digging for treasure, Grandma," was the matter-of-fact reply.

"Ooohhh. Have you found any?" I queried of the excavating crew, a pair of small boys diligently bent to their chosen task for the afternoon. On an earlier treasure excavation, a small plastic toy figure had been found. So the possibility of actually excavating something buried–besides the resident earthworms—had some slight possibilities. And while this newly-dug hole on this particular day lay near the porch stairs at their own house, a scruffy patch of lawn just off our basement porch is another favorite archaeological site for the four and the two-year olds with their Grandpa-inspired lineup of digging equipment.

Treasure, to a large degree, lies in the eyes of the beholder. Panning out a fistful of fat gold nuggets from a stream, or unearthing the equivalent of the gigantic Hope diamond would indisputably be treasure to just about any of us. But in many cases, what's "treasure" to one individual may simply be a piece of junk to another

Just the recent weather itself—clear, crisp, bright, sunny—has been like a string of precious gems. But one stunning day last week proved to be especially "treasured."

The early-morning shift of the milking groups had gone exceptionally smooth, I was back in the office with a little time to spare before calf feeding. Eyeing the scattered papers littering the desk, I yanked a file cabinet drawer in search of the folder for one particularly important one. And couldn't locate the file.

"We're going to get rid of some of this stuff," I grumbled to the cat, and began yanking out folders holding long-forgotten papers and books. This was The Farmer's file drawer (which he kept promising to clean out), a repository for printed "stuff" from as far back as his high school vo-ag years. Within 10 minutes, a stack of empty manilla folders was growing, as well as a pile of "stuff" he needed to review before I pitched it.

Then, I found it. Treasure.

A small, thin paper folder. Red, white and blue. With a U.S. Treasury symbol on it.

As a high school vo-ag student, The Farmer had been one of 40 of the county's senior high boys given the opportunity one year during the York Fair to take part in a Calf Wrestling event. Forty 4-H and FFA boys were turned loose in a pen with 20 young, weaned beef calves, just off the Virginia range pastures. A catch-and-keep-calf for whoever "wrassled" and haltered each one. Every participant was given a $25 U.S. Savings Bond. He was also one of the lucky 20 who took home a Hereford calf.

That Bond had disappeared soon after we married and moved here. For years we had wondered where it was.

Before going out to feed calves, I carefully placed it on the kitchen table for him to find.

Later in the day, our very special treasures—the three grandchildren—arrived with their mom to share lunch. We took pictures, played in the creek, gathered black walnuts in the meadow. Back home in the kitchen, I found a small surprise bouquet of wildflowers from The Farmer. And a pack of paperwhite narcissus bulbs, special for forcing into wintertime bloom in the greenhouse. A day with a string of little treasures.

And, with great curiosity, we called the bank for a current value on the Savings Bond. It has increased in worth... more than seven times its mature face value. A tiny "treasure," for sure, but then I still pick up dropped pennies.

Keep digging, guys.

Hard telling what we might unearth next.

Mist Not Good For All Produce

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — In supermarket produce cases across the country, fruits and vegetables are sprayed with a fine water mist – mostly to make them look good. But a vegetable expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences says misting can be a mistake for some produce.

Pete Ferretti, professor of vegetable crops, says excess water can cause some fruits and vegetables to rot. He cites The Packer, the weekly newspaper of the produce industry, for guidelines on misting produce.

• Produce that needs to be misted regularly: Brussels sprouts, cabbage, celery, sweet corn, eggplant, collard and kale greens, leeks, radishes, turnips and limes.

"Most of these fruits and vegetables have thick and waxy skin or leaves, and heavy moisture won't affect them as much," Ferretti says

• Produce that should be misted lightly· asparagus, beets, bell peppers, broccoli, carrots, cauliflower, endive, all lettuces, green onions, snap beans, spinach, summer squash and zucchini

"Light moisture means exactly that," Ferretti says "Too much moisture really can cause storage problems with this group"

Some produce must be kept dry bulb onions, garlic, chili peppers and winter squash never should be misted

Ferretti also says markets shouldn't store produce in standing water – asparagus is regularly displayed this way – because bacteria can grow in the water. Asparagus should be displayed on a wetted mat or towel

Plant Bulbs Now For Spring Blooms

WOOSTER, Ohio — Hardy bulbs provide early blooms and foliage for bright spring gardens. Hardy bulbs withstand low winter temperatures and bloom year after year. After spring bloom, they rest in a dormant state over the summer months. Low temperatures are required to break dormancy so growth can resume in fall and early winter.

Bulbs are usually purchased in early autumn. Planting can occur from mid-August until the soil freezes, although it's best to plant daffodils in September or early October. Daffodils require a longer period for root development.

You will need anywhere from a few to hundreds of bulbs, depending upon the size of the site you've chosen for planting. Be sure to inspect the bulbs before planting. They should be firm, plump and healthy. Discard any bulbs that feel lightweight, soft or show signs of mold. Don't forget to inspect the basal plate, or the flat, bottom side of the bulb that produces roots. It should be intact and injury-free.

Bulbs should be planted in full sun to partial shade – those located in full sun will bloom earlier. Planting bulbs in large drift patterns will result in a natural-looking sea of color in spring. You may choose to plant a wave of bulbs in a "wild" area. This allows foliage to wither away without interruption after blooming. Bulbs may be planted on a grassy slope, under deciduous trees, near the edge of a wooded area, or to cover a bank. Bulb plantings will multiply each year, increasing the display the following season.

Bulbs require well-drained soil. If soil is too wet, bulbs may rot. A medium sandy-loam soil texture is ideal for bulbs because it provides good aeration and drainage. If soil is a heavy clay, mix in one-third to one-half organic material such as peat moss, compost or aged bark. Raised beds also provide good drainage. The soil pH should be between 6.0 and 7.0.

Soil should be worked about 12 inches deep, and loosened below the bulb for good root development. Incorporate three pounds of a complete fertilizer, such as 5-10-10 per 100 square-feet as soil is prepared. Hyacinths should be planted 6 inches deep; tulips and daffodils 6 inches or deeper. Smaller bulbs in these groups and minor bulbs should be planted 2 to 3 inches deep. Large bulbs in these groups should be spaced 4 to 6 inches apart; small bulbs 1 to 2 inches. After planting, replace half the depth of soil, then water. Finish covering soil and water again.

Provide water as needed to promote root development. You may choose to spread mulch over newly planted areas once the soil has frozen to a depth of 1 to 2 inches. This keeps soil frozen and prevents alternate freezing and thawing which may cause soil to heave and injure bulbs.

The "ghosts and goblins" will soon be gathering for Halloween parties. What kinds of party fare will you provide this year?

Why not make your party treats count nutritionally? Instead of candies, consider fruits, vegetables, breads, cereals, milk, cheese, peanut butter, nuts and seeds. Not only will they be good for the youngsters, they're fun too.

For younger children try:

- A fruit milkshake – a banana blended with milk and seasoned with a dash of nutmeg or cinnamon.
- An orange smoothie.
- Strawberry Yogurt popsicle.
- Apple slices peeled and spread with peanut butter or soft cheese.
- Cereal cookies baked on popsicle sticks.
- Breads made with fruits or vegetables, like banana, zucchini or pumpkin.

At a Halloween party for older children or teenagers, try these popular but still healthful snacks:

- Hot spicy fruit juices
- Fruit punch made with a mixture of juices, like grape-orange or cranberry apple with club soda for "fizz."
- Celery stuffed with cottage cheese, bean dip, peanut butter, peanut butter with raisins, or pimento cheese.
- Nachos – a food fad of shredded cheese on corn chips, broiled until the cheese melts.
- Snack pizza – guests choose their own toppings from lean ground beef, lean ham bits, onion, mushrooms and green pepper.
- Pita bread sandwiches – each teen fills the pocketbread with "salad bar" items like shredded lettuce or cabbage; cheese; lean roast meat; refried beans; chopped egg, onions, cucumbers or tomatoes; sliced green peppers or zucchini; and several choices of salad dressing.

Here are recipes you might try.

Snack Pizzas

(makes about 10)

9-1/2 ounce pkg. refrigerator biscuits, flaky (10 biscuits)
1/4 cup tomato paste
1 teaspoon oregano
1/4 cup onion, chopped
1/3 cup canned mushrooms, chopped
1/2 cup natural sharp cheddar cheese, shredded

Preheat oven to 400°F (hot). Grease baking sheets. Pat each biscuit into a 4-inch circle on baking sheets. Mix tomato paste and oregano. Brush on each biscuit round. Mix onion and mushrooms. Sprinkle over tomato paste mixture. Top with shredded cheese. Bake until crust is lightly browned (about 8 minutes).

NOTE: Ingredients such as cooked lean ground beef, lean ham bits or chopped green pepper may be used in place of, or along with onions and mushrooms.

Strawberry-Yogurt Popsicles

(Makes 12)

2 - 10-ounce cartons frozen strawberries, thawed
1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
16 ounce carton yogurt, plain
12 3-ounce paper cups
12 wooden sticks

Drain strawberries. Place drained liquid in a sauce pan and sprinkle with gelatin. Cook over low heat stirring constantly, until gelatin dissolves. Mix strawberries, yogurt and gelatin mixture in a blender until smooth. Place cups on a tray or in a baking pan. Fill with blended mixture and cover cups with a sheet of aluminum foil. Insert a stick for each popsicle by making a slit in the foil over the center of each cup. Freeze popsicles until firm. To loosen, run warm water on outside of cup.

Face Painting Guidelines

Brush on faces make for quick, instantly recognizable costumes and eliminate the need for masks, which can obstruct breathing and vision. Application is simple: protect clothing with a towel or smock. Apply non-toxic, water based make-up paints with cotton swabs or a soft paintbrush. Use gentle strokes – be especially careful around the eyes. To remove use soap and water. (Before painting, dab paint on the inside forearm and cover with a bandage. Check for allergic reaction 2 to 3 days later.) Face painting should not be used on children under 3 years old.

Why Do Some Women Get Diabetes When Pregnant?

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Experts aren't exactly certain why about 135,000 pregnant women, or about 4 percent of U.S. women who become pregnant each year, come down with gestational diabetes. These are women who have never had diabetes before, but get high blood glucose levels during pregnancy. If gestational diabetes strikes, it usually does so in about the sixth month of pregnancy.

Gestational diabetes can cause serious problems for both the mother and baby if undiagnosed and untreated. The condition disappears after the baby is born, but women who contract it are at higher risk for developing diabetes later in life. About half of women who experience gestational diabetes will contract adult-onset diabetes in the years to come.

Here's what experts think happens: After the baby is formed and is busy growing, hormones from the mother's placenta help the baby develop. For some reason, the hormones also block the normal action of insulin for these mothers — the mother's body cannot make or use all the insulin it needs during pregnancy. Without insulin doing its job, cells in the muscles and other tissues have trouble grabbing onto glucose traveling through the bloodstream. No matter how much insulin the pancreas makes, blood sugar remains high.

High blood sugar, or hyperglycemia, is bad news. Over time, it can increase the risk of eye, kidney and nerve damage, heart attack and stroke. High blood glucose levels in the mother spread to the bloodstream of the forming baby, whose pancreas must make extra insulin to get rid of the glucose. Extra glucose and insulin causes the baby's body to make extra fat, increasing the baby's size. That poses potential problems during birth and increases the likelihood of a Caesarean section. As a newborn, the baby may have very low blood glucose levels and may have a higher risk for breathing problems. As they grow, they're at higher risk for obesity and adult-onset diabetes.

Awards Galore At 4-H Recognition Night

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

PARADISE (Lancaster Co.) — Four-H competitions teach winning with humility and losing with dignity. The annual 4-H Recognition Night held Tuesday at the Historic Revere Tavern, was a time for hundreds of members to revel in winning.

Sarah Boyd, Ephrata, was estactic. "I worked 10 years for this," the 18-year-old said about being selected as the outstanding 4-H'er for the Superior Achievement Award. "But I couldn't have done this without my family."

While most of the awards are based on accomplishments during the past year, the prestigious Superior Achievement Award requires years of diligent effort. The award is based on a culminative projects, leadership abilities, decision making, participation in club, county, regional, state, and national 4-H events, and community service during a member's 4-H career.

Many 4-H'ers desire to attain the coveted award, but Sarah had a special reason for wanting the Superior Achievement Award. The award was initially begun as a memorial in honor of her grandparents' Elmer L. And Pauline E. Boyd. Elmer had been a 4-H leader for 28 years. His wife had been a 4-H leader for at least 10 years.

Sarah grew up hearing about the award, watching older 4-H members strive for the honor and the presentation at the annual award banquets. Her own brother Gerald received the award two years ago.

Another big accomplishment for Sarah was receiving a 4-H scholarship for $1,500, which she will use to pursue a teaching degree at Millersville College.

Another 4-H'er, Barry Gochnauer received a $1,000 scholarship.

Honor Roll recipients included Joel Buckwalter, Barry Gochnauer, and James Mullen in the senior division. Elizabeth Diehm and Rebecca Diehm were selected as junior division winners.

Top Ten Blue Form Scrapbook Awards went to the following: For members from 7 to 10 years, Sarah Boyd, Barry Gochnauer, Sarah Graybill, and Janine Leaman. For members from 4 to 6 years were Loren Hershey, Mandie Holloway, and Erik Nussbaum. And members from 1 to 3 years went to Elizabeth Diehm, Rebecca Diehm, and Jenica Messner.

Performing talent throughout the evening were Kevin Hoober, who won first place in the junior division for a piano solo; Tony Gochnauer, second place in the senior division for trumpet solo with accompanient; Abbey Fulmer, second place in the junior division; and Lisa Hershey, third place in the junior division for piano solo.

The Senior Livestock Judging Team included members John Hess, Kevin Pfautz, Jeff Rohrer, and Jessica Schmidt.

Not all awards went to members. The 4-H program relies upon volunteer leaders to instruct the clubs. For 20 years of service, two leaders, Rebecca Irvine and Elaine Sensenig, received a certificate, a gold with diamond 4-H Clover pin and an engraved silver plate.

Leaders dedicating 15 years of service were Marlin Becker and Dorothy Strickler. Karen Fahnestock and Rose Landis Ward were given awards for serving 10 years as leaders. Those recognized for five years of leadership were Cindy Denlinger, Rose Denlinger, Bob Hoffines, Lynette Leaman, Earl Nussbaum, Janice Rayburn, and Thomas Rayburn.

Daina Savage, former farm news reporter for the "Intelligencer Journal," received the Friend of 4-H Award, for her dedication in reporting 4-H activities.

Savage, who had been a 4-H member for 10 years before becoming a news reporter, said, "It was a pleasure to watch a program that similarly shaped my life. I am grateful to have had the opportunity to work with people who give us food and care for the land," she said.

Although 4-H is a traditional program, Becky Miller, president of the 4-H Leaders Club, promised that next year will be different. "The annual 4-H Fair will not look the same, be called the same name or even be at the same location."

For 20 years of serving as 4-H leaders, Rebecca Irvine, left, and Elaine Sensenig, received a certificate, a gold with diamond 4-H Clover pin and an engraved silver plate.

"I couldn't have done this without my family," Sarah Boyd said of winning the prestigious Superior Achievement Award. With Sarah, from left, is her brother, Gerald, and parents, Kerry and Deb Boyd.

Who Is Sarah Boyd?

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Ten years is a long time to work toward a goal. Especially when you are only eight years old.

That was Sarah Boyd's age when she made it her goal to someday win the prestigious 4-H Superior Achievement Award given annually to the member who excels as the most outstanding 4-H youth.

Sarah's achievement was no easy feat. At times, she was tempted to quit as she struggled to sychronized school, sports, and 4-H responsibilities. The award is based upon culminative achievements from 4-H involvement during a member's 4-H career, an interview process, blue book records of her 4-H accomplishments, and a written article about what 4-H means to her.

"The most important thing to realize is that you can't win this award by yourself. You need a family involved. My parents, brother, grandparents, aunts, and uncles all had an impact in helping me reach this award," Sarah said.

In fact, the award was established 17 years ago in memory of Sarah's grandparents' Elmer L. And Pauline E. Boyd. Elmer had been a 4-H leader for 28 years. His wife had been a 4-H leader for at least 10 years. Sarah's dad and brothers grew up excelling in many 4-H activities.

As an eight-year-old, Sarah began showing pigs as a 4-H project. From the beginning, she experienced success. But wanting "to make the better — best, Sarah and her brother chose to start breeding their own stock instead of buying hogs.

Later she began showing sheep, heifers, and goats. Through this she learned responsibility in completing her chores and to manage time and money effectively.

"I learned to allow enough time to do my chores correctly and to save money to pay for feed and beding costs for the animals," Sarah said.

Each year, Sarah diligently filled out the forms and completed her "blue book" each year. She won junior honor roll and later senior honor roll — a requirement for the superior award.

The bubbly, always smiling 18-year-old, often speaks in exclamations with friends and family. Before a crowd, she is fluent and poised with just enough spark to energize the audience with her belief: "If you believe you can accomplish something, you can. Even if you fail, get up and try again...and again."

The 18-year-old about to embark on college said, "Part of the reason for where I am today is that at a key point in my life — when my life was on the edge — it could have gone one way or the other — my parents sent me to the 4-H leadership conference."

Sarah said that the friends she made at the conference helped point her in the right direction and encouraged her to break off friendships that were having a negative influence on her.

Sarah said that watching her older brother Gerald, now 21, had a strong influence on helping her make right choices. "I saw where he went, and how he dealt with things, and that impacted me to follow in his footsteps."

Sarah attended the 4-H leadership conference for four years, two years as a student, and the last two as a counselor in charge of younger members. She excelled at the county level, then at the regional and state levels.

An Ephrata High School graduate, Sarah had played field hockey, basketball and softball, and was a member of the FFA.

Blue Form Scrapbook Awards went to Erik Nussbaum, Elizabeth Diehm, Barry Gochnauer, Sarah Graybill, Rebecca Dieh, Sarah Boyd and Loren Hershey.

Happy Halloween

It's that time of year again! If you have children in your household you know exactly what's on my mind.

Yes, Halloween will soon be here whether you are ready or not. Dressing up in costumes, carrying jack o' lanterns and trick or treating are probably already on the minds of your young children.

Your challenge as a parent is to help make Halloween a wonderful, safe experience. Many costuming possibilities exist without entering into the scary, or media-influenced characters. Consider simple costumes made from materials you have on hand. Encourage young children to choose reassuring ideas rather than scary or violent costumes. Consider the Halloween costumes as an addition to their dramatic dress up clothes. Plan to get the costumes out several times each year for the children. You will be amazed at how many hours of fun they will have in dramatic, make believe play at times other than Halloween.

Think about materials you already have on hand. Cardboard boxes, aluminum foil, paint, markers, egg cartons, and milk boxes are just a few "on hand" materials that hold some potential. Something as simple as a paper plate can be cut out in a mask form and secured with elastic string or glued to a popsicle stick for the child to hold in front of their face. Part of the fun will be in making the mask and the child will develop pride in making it themselves.

Be prepared to have extra sweets coming into the home at Halloween time. Despite nutritionist's recommendations, candy is still the treat that is most commonly given to neighborhood ghosts and goblins. That can cause a problem for parents that prefer a no candy in the house rule. Concerned parents can use the Halloween treat bag to teach their youngsters the meaning of 'treat' as something to enjoy occasionally. Learning moderation through self control and rationing is an important part of practicing good nutrition. Children should learn that eating a variety of foods is good but some foods, such as high fat and/or high sugar candy should be only eaten occasionally.

Ensuring a happy Halloween for your child includes following some basic safety guidelines. Reviewing these very basic common sense points will help make a safe Halloween for you and your child:

- Provide kids a flashlight when they go trick or treating.
- Decorate costumes, bags or sacks with reflective tape.
- Look for flame-retardent costumes.
- To avoid falls, dress children in clothes and shoes that fit.
- Use face paint or buy masks that do not restrict vision. Test paint on a small area to make sure that the child is not allergic to any of the ingredients.
- Teach kids to stay on sidewalks, where they are much less likely to stumble over items that can't be seen in the dark.
- Remove stumbling blocks form your porch or sidewalk, i.e. toys.
- Caution children against running while eating candy.
- Look over all treats that have been collected and discard anything that's questionable.

Apples In America

- The first apple orchard was planted in Boston by clergyman William Blaxton. Two governors of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, John Winthrop and John Endecott, also planted orchards. In 1644, Endecott wrote of his need to replenish his orchard because his children accidentally burned 500 of his trees.
- New Amsterdam Governor Peter Stuyvesant laid out a farm called "The Bouwerie" in the lower part of Manhattan where he planted grafted trees from Holland.
- By the beginning of the nineteenth century, almost every homesteader had at least one apple tree. Washington Irving describes these farms: "Here were small farms, each having its little portion of meadow and cornfield, its orchard of gnarled and sprawling apple trees." The apple tree provided much: food, drink, forage for animals, wood for whittling, small machine parts and fragrant firewood.

John Chapman, a.k.a. Johnny Appleseed, was a missionary of the Swedenborgian faith. He lived frugally, never owned a home, dressed in whatever he could find, and often went barefoot in summer and winter. He traveled throughout the Ohio Valley country, planting and tending seedling apple-tree nurseries, and distributing seeds and trees to the early frontier settlers. Johnny Appleseed died in 1845 and is buried in Fort Wayne, Indiana, where his grave is a part of a memorial park in tribute to him.

½ cup dried whole wheat bread crumbs
1 large tomato, chopped

Melt butter in large skillet. Add the onion and broccoli and cook the vegetables until just tender, stirring often. Add water if needed. In a separate bowl, combine milk, eggs, Swiss cheese, and all the seasonings. Add the broccoli, onions, and tender-cooked lentils, and stir.

In a small bowl, mix the parmesan cheese and bread crumbs and spread half the mixture on bottom of 9-inch pie plate. Cover with chopped tomato and pour the broccoli-egg mixture over all. Sprinkle remainder of parmesan-crumb mixture on top. Bake in a 350-degree oven. Let stand 20 minutes before serving. Cut into wedges. To reheat cold quiche, place in microwave for 30 seconds. Serves 8.

First Ag Tour A Success

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — "What's catgut made out of?" veterinarian Grant Stufft challenged a group of third graders. He held up an S-shaped needle and long thread, but heard no reply.

"Sheep intestines!"

This interesting tidbit was only an inkling of what more than 160 third graders learned during the Mifflin County Farm Bureau Third Grade Ag Tour held Sept. 21 at Dry House Farm near Belleville. Dr. Stufft was one of sixteen presenters. The school children spent the morning dodging raindrops going from station to station every 10 minutes to learn about agriculture. In the afternoon, they watched cows being milked in the parlor and followed the milk process from the bulk tank to the milk truck to Susan Geringer, who talked about various milk products, and then to the snack area for ice cream.

The children walked from station to station in groups of 10 to 12. After visiting Dr. Stufft's station (the Cow Doctor), the children walked along the catwalk high above the free-stall barn while farm wife Connie Parkes talked about various types of bedding.

At the Soil Conservation District station, Bill Stidfole let children handle different soil types. At Meet the Plant, Penn State Extension horticulturist Ann Bonson talked about the parts of a plant and which parts we're eating when we eat fruits and vegetables such as celery, peanuts, asparagus, and broccoli.

At the cereals station, Ken Glick and Andy Esh of Union Mills Soil Service encouraged children to roll heads of wheat and barley between their hands to remove the kernels. They then compared these with processed cereals most kids eat for breakfast

Dry House Farm co-owner Lester Yoder manned the Forages and Machinery station in a nearby hay field. He and his brother Ray positioned a forage harvester and haybine nearby and let the children handle samples of silage and haylage. At the next station, Dave Hunsberger of Agway continued to cover animal nutrition by providing more samples of feed and minerals.

Don Hartzler and Dennis Strock of Union Mills Soil Service enlisted the help of a mannequin named Steve Safety to stress the importance of handling chemicals safely. The mannequin wore a hat, safety goggles, protective clothing, gloves and rubber boots.

4-H and FFA youth brought animals for showmanship demonstrations and a petting zoo. From there, the children went to learn about honey bees from Joe Morgan. Morgan and others with him gave each child a honey stick.

Veterinarian Dr. Monica McGee showed the children tools, including X rays, that she uses to help calves become healthy milk cows.

After lunch, the Yoders milked a couple of cows while one-third of all the school children at a time packed into the parlor to watch. Martin Smith stationed himself inside the milk house beside the bulk tank to explain that area. Then the group moved outside to the waiting bulk milk truck. After an ice cream snack and a presentation by Mifflin County's Dairy Princess Gayle Stine, the children boarded the buses for a trip back to their respective schools.

The Mifflin County Farm Bureau's Promotion and Education committee, chaired by Elrose Glick of Belleville, spent more than a year planning for this event.

Petting zoos tend to be a popular spot. Here, kids could hold kids, rabbits, chickens, and a baby pig. Mifflin County FFA students managed this petting zoo.

Don Hartzler and Dennis Strock of Union Mills Soil Service use a mannequin named Steve Safety to illustrate how to handle chemicals safely.

A father held his newborn son for the first time in the hospital, looked up and with great surprise said, "I love him!"

The father was taken back by the rush of emotion that filled his heart during this first meeting, and a bonding between the father and son had begun. This same father was also involved in feeding, bathing, and caring for the newborn and as a result, a solid relationship was formed early on.

When the baby was about six months old, the father expressed how impossible it would be, to convey to someone without children, how wonderful the role of parenthood was, and how so much had been missing from his life beforehand, and he didn't even know it. As fathers become more involved in their child's life, and feel free in expressing their love and commitment for their children, everyone, especially the child, benefits.

It used to be assumed that women were more naturally suited to raising and nurturing young children then were men. This notion is slowly changing as researchers discover that while the interactions are somewhat different, fathers naturally have the ability to play a very valuable role in their child's life right from the start Research in maternity wards shows that fathers touch, talk to, and look at their babies much the same as mothers do They were just as responsive to the baby's cries, and when the amount of milk the parent was able to get the baby to drink was measured, fathers did just as well as mothers. When mothers were in the room however, the fathers left the childcare to the mother

In some ways the father/infant interaction is different than the mother/infant interaction is different than the mother/infant interaction. Fathers are more likely to pick up their infant to play, whereas mothers are more likely to do so for caretaking purposes. Infants engaged in spontaneous talking more with their fathers than mothers. Fathers were also more likely to engage in smiling, and facial interaction with their infants, while mothers were more likely to vocalize to the infants.

All of this points to the fact that mothers and fathers are not necessarily interchangeable, but that each brings their own strength of interacting with their baby. The end result of all this nurturing and interacting is a happy baby bonded closely with both parents. So remember, when a father is caring for his infant child he is not being "Mr. Mom," he is simply being "Dad."

Traits of Good Fathers

Each father goes about his parenting in his own way. However, a few things have been found that good fathers have in common.

Involvement: Good fathers are involved in the lives of their children. They attend their child's performances, games, and activities. They also involve the child in their adult world – letting them see their work, taking them with them to the car repair garage or asking their help on a project.

Support: Good fathers have high expectations for their children but are supportive and accepting too. They are never ashamed of their child.

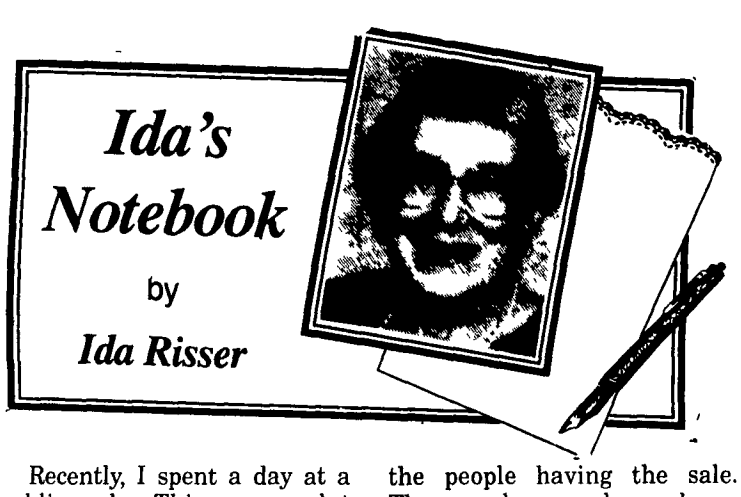
Discipline: Good fathers are firm. They let their children know what they believe and what they expect; but they guide their children with reasoning and explanations more than force.

Time: Good fathers realize that if they are going to have the influence that they want to have with their children, it is going to take time. They think of it as investing time not just spending time Fathers are busy, and children can learn to appreciate that. Good fathers learn to say, "How much time will it take?" instead of "Not right now." The time spend when a child needs it may be more valuable than the time spent when it is convenient for the fathers.

Benefits To Fathers

Being involved as a father is not only good just for the children. It is good for the father. One of the positive notes in families today is that fathers are playing an active role in many aspects of family life. When father's work moved from the farm to the office and factory, they were obviously less available to their children. For many years, we have assumed that this is the way it should be—Dad's job always comes first. This is gradually changing as more fathers and children realize the importance of the role of the father

Adapted from: The Role of Fathers, Thomas R. Lee, Ph.D., Utah State University.



Recently, I spent a day at a public sale This was a bit unusual for me because I have not done this lately.

When I married, I went to sales regularly to furnish our house. Some days I came home with pots and pans, and other items there were pillows and blankets in the car. Gradually some larger items were purchased such as a desk for my husband or an old camel-back trunk for me

When we look over an accumulation of a lifetime, many memories flood back into our minds. Just where did we buy that particular picture? If only such items could talk. I bought a primitive cheese-cutter rocker that dated to 1810 – and just think what it could tell us.

The things that are for sale tell a lot about the lifestyle of the people having the sale. There are boxes and more boxes of books, boxes of decorations and many, many dishes. A great deal of money was spent on these things and now they sell for fifty centers or a dollar.

I have spent many weeks preparing for the public sale of three different households. It is a tiring but interesting job as you sort through drawer after drawer and shelf after shelf We think we will not leave such a mess for others to work with but then we do the very same thing.

It is sad to see the objects that we've lived with all our lives go to strangers. But life moves on and, if we are lucky, our children and grandchildren will cherish some of the things and carry them home to eventually be passed on to their descendants.

Who Is Sarah Boyd?

"It was hard to be in both sports and 4-H. It was frustrating to leave practice early to show animals, but my coach was understanding.

Sarah never missed a game. She scored 17 goals playing field hockey offensive.

She did need to curtail her time spent at the Pennsylvania Farm Show when she played basketball.

This past summer, Sarah went with a 4-H team to Poland.

"We went to tour and learn about their 4-H program. I stayed with a host family, in order to learn their way of life, eat their food, and understand their culture," Sarah said.

The experience surprised her.

She had always imagined that middle class Americans had a higher standard of living than people in Poland. "But my host family lived in a gorgeous house."

The family included four girls who spoke a little English. With the help of a dictionary, Sarah learned to communicate with the family.

4-H in Poland is a bit different than in the states. Clubs include instruction in cooking, baking, and helping their moms around house. Projects can include studying the history of a tree, or famous people and landmarks.

At the Poland 4-H Camp, the U.S. team told them how impromptu public speaking contests are held and set up a typical contest where members stood before the audience to answer impromptu questions.

"You could tell they weren't experienced in public speaking. They seemed nervous. I think their club will take some of our ideas," Sarah said.

When Sarah left, her host mother cried and said that she didn't want to see Sarah leave because Sarah had made her family so happy. "I'll miss your smiling face," she said.

Through 4-H, Sarah determined that studying elementary education seemed a logical career for her.

"At 4-H leadership conferences, I really liked working with children, and being a role model," Sarah said.

In January, Sarah will start school at Millersville University. In the meantime she is caring for the animals on the family's Clay View Farm, Ephrata. She has nine pigs, 25 sheep, four goats, and one dairy heifer that she is grooming for the Pennsylvania Farm Show and for next year's (her final) 4-H involvement.

This past fair season was an especially exciting one for Sarah. She showed the champion market lamb at five fairs. She also had the reserve at one fair, the champion and reserve market goat at another fair, and the reserve champion Brown Swiss at Roundup that was named Junior champion. She showed both a champion and reserve champion pig at local fairs, and at Keystone International Livestock Exposition, she showed the grand champion barrow overall (based on foot and rail scores).

The Boyds' living room is filled with trophies, which stuns visitors when they find out the trophies were accumulated from only one season instead of Sarah's 10 years of 4-H involvement.

Sarah's dad, Kerry, is a salesman. Her mom, Deb, works at a greenhouse, and her brother is studying elementary education at Millersville University.

Superior Achievement Award Winner Sarah Boyd has an impressive array of trophies and ribbons — all won this year — for showing pigs, sheep, goat, and beef.

introducing the changes "for the new millennium."

In addition, two new awards will be offered at next year's Recognition Night. One for the Outstanding Officer and another called the Spirit of 4-H Award, which will embody the four H's (head, heart, hands, and health).

Jim Shirk, Poultry Council of Penn Ag Industries Association, served as master of ceremonies.

Union County Holds Farm Rescue Training

LEWISBURG (Union Co.) — More than 30 firemen and emergency medical and rescue personnel from four counties recently participated in a two-day farm rescue training program held in Union County. The program was co-sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension, Union County Department of Emergency Services, Penn State Geisinger EMS and Union County Farm Bureau.

The two-day program kicked off with an evening classroom session held at the William Cameron Engine Company in Lewisburg. Participants had a choice of attending two of three concurrent sessions. The topics that wee taught included Livestock Injuries, Farm Machinery Accidents and Farm Chemical Incidents.

Evaluations received from the participants indicated that one of the unique aspects of using case studies that were team taught by an agriculture agent and physician allowed the participants to follow the victim every step beginning with how the injury happened through the emergency room, surgery, and post-operative therapy. This holistic patient approach that combines accident prevention, rescue techniques and medical treatment allowed for new solutions to be explored how rescue gear and supplies are best stored and distributed.

The instructor teams included Penn State Extension agent Chuck Gale and Dr. Doug Kupas on farm machinery accidents, Penn State Extension agent Dave Hartman and Dr. Amy Snover on livestock injury, and Penn State Extension agent Norman Conrad on farm chemical poisonings and fires. The instructors used a variety of teaching techniques including the case studies, materials from the new Farm Rescue training book published by the Northeast Regional Ag Engineering Service. Participants received continuing education credits through the Central Susquehanna EMS Council.

The second day of the program was held on a Saturday at the Walter farm in Kelly Township. During a beautiful sunny day, the 30 rescue and medical personnel got to climb inside grain bins, augers, show silo rescue problems, have demonstration models on tractor roll-over and PTO entanglements. The group was able to discuss and demonstrate round baler entrapments and release techniques by their host, dairy farmer Gary Walter, and farm medic instructor Barry Lewis. Rescue personnel, the farm host families, sponsors and neighbors then enjoyed a pig roast luncheon prepared and donated by the local farmers and Hostetter Management Inc.

Got Milk Recipes?

HATFIELD (Montgomery Co.) — In 1925, when Calvin Coolidge promoted business in America, he also enjoyed his favorite foods at the White House. The President was particularly fond of pineapple salad with cream sauce, corn muffins and custard pie.

That same year Rosenberger's Dairies launched its business in Hatfield, producing many of the same ingredients called for in President Coolidge's choice recipes. The start-up delivered fresh milk from its farm seven days a week to area families. As Rosenberger's approaches its 75th anniversary, it continues to deliver milk in glass bottles, as well as many other products, to homes throughout the Delaware Valley.

As part of its anniversary celebration in 2000, Rosenberger's will publish a commemorative cookbook of recipes that includes one more of its dairy products. Anyone who has an original recipe that calls for milk, sour cream, heavy or light cream, cottage cheese, yogurt, ricotta cheese, egg nog, butter or margarine is welcome to submit it for consideration. No purchase necessary.

All recipes must call for one or more Rosenberger products. Entries may be submitted from Oct. 15, 1999 through March 31, 2000. In order to enter:

1. Type or print the recipe on an 8-1/2 x 11 sheet of paper.

2. Be specific with preparation directions, measurements (no pinches or smidgens) and cooking instructions. Personal hints to make the dish even better may be included.

3. Include, on a separate page, interesting information about the recipe, how it was created or handed down, particular times it is served, such as holidays or other family occasions, and a brief background of the submitter.

4. Anyone may enter as often as they wish, but each entry must be separate.

5. Include your full name, address and phone number with each entry.

6. Type or print on the outside of the envelope whether the recipe category is Appetizer and Soups, Main Course or Dessert.

7. All entries must be postmarked no later than March 31, 2000.

8. Send entries to: Rosenberger's Dairies, 75th Anniversary Commemorative Cookbook Recipe Contest, 847 Forty Foot Road, Hatfield, PA 19440-2898.

Winning recipes will be published in the commemorative cookbook. A Got Milk Recipe Cook-off, to be held during Dairy Month (June) 2000, will determine the grand prize winners in each category.

Symposium To Feature Pennsylvania German Cookery

GREEN LANE (Montgomery Co.) — What did, Great, Great, Great Grandmother Moyer or Hinterleiter feed the family and the hired man?

What food items did she prepare for special occasions, folk holidays and harvest meals? What was everyday fare in the hearth era?

Did she really bake shoe-fly pie, make funnel cakes or prepare potato filling in 1790 or 1850?

Answers to some of these questions should be addressed at the Nov. 6, all-day seminar sponsored by the Goschenhoppen Historians and held in Green Lane.

The purpose of this seminar is to provide interested person with documented research. Sources include material from oral interviews with folk informants, old manuscripts and diaries, and manuscript and early printed recipe books. These sources indicate a far different picture of Pennsylvania German foods from that presented to the public today at many living history presentations, restaurants and the tourist bureaus.

The all-day session will be held in Red Men's Hall in Green Lane, located just west of the intersection of state Routes 29 and 63. Registration begins at 8:30 a.m and the program starts at 9 a.m. A box lunch (in a "tut") will be provided as part of the $35 registration fee.

The secondary purpose of the symposium is to serve as a fund raiser for the restoration of the 1736 Henry Antes House, a National Historic Landmark so designated by the United States Department of the Interior. Proceeds will go to the Antes House Resoration Fund. The Historians are a federally tax exempt non-profit organization; thus the registration fee is tax deductible.

Registration is by advance notice only, confirmed with a check made out to Goschenhoppen Historians and sent to P.O. Box 476, Green Lane, PA 18054. Registration must be accomplished by Nov. 1. For information contact "Abe" Roan at (610) 367-8286.

Following the seminar at 4 p.m. the 1736 Antes House will be open for inspection by seminar participants. The site is a short drive from Red Men's Hall.

What Will Happen To Your Heritage?

YORK (York Co.) — To assist you to plan what you would like to have happen with your heritage, Penn State Extension is offering "Planning Your Heritage," a series of evening meetings to be held this fall in Adams, Cumberland, Franklin and York counties.

Guest speaker for the meetings will be Carlisle attorney Stephen L. Bloom who concentrates his law practice on estate planning, business law, real estate transactions, and elder law.

The meetings will be structured to allow for many questions from participants. Some specific considerations will include:

- What do I need to consider for my own security?
- How can I prepare for the unexpected – disability, divorce, death (the 3Ds)?
- What legal documents must I have prepared to best protect my spouse and heirs?
- How can my business have the best chance for survival into the next generation?
- What is "fair" treatment for each of my heirs?

The first meeting will concentrate on business transfer. This discussion will be applicable to any small business – sales, construction, garage, orchard or farm. Emphasis will be placed on the need to consider separately the transfer of each component – business operation, depreciable assets, real estate, and business management and control.

The second meeting is titled "Providing for the unexpected," and is aimed to help you plan so that if or when an unfortunate event such as disability, divorce or death happens, people will not be left without some provision. Important tools such as trusts, wills and insurance, and their roles in the planning process will be discussed.

The programs are free, and no pre-registration is required. Programs will begin at 7 p.m. and conclude at 9 p.m. For more information on the program, contact Roland Freund at (717) 240-6500. For directions call the county contact. Locations and dates are as follows:

Rich Ingredients Make Natural Milk Soaps

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

COLUMBIA CROSS ROADS (Bradford County) – With 100 registered Holstein cows, one Brown Swiss and two Jerseys, Karen Coulter has plenty of rich milk and cream, two of the main ingredients for her all natural soaps, right at her fingertips.

Those basic ingredients combine with lye in a cold pour process produce soaps that Karen markets with help of modern technology; a computer and a website.

Karen began making milk soap two years ago. "I'd been thinking about making soap for a long time," she said. "On a farm you can always use more income, so I was just trying to figure out a way to make some money. And, I enjoy doing things like this. It kind of fits in with the farm."

Karen, her husband Roger, and 9-year-old Kevin, operate Willowmoor Farms, a 146-acre dairy nestled in the Endless Mountains of Pennsylvania near Columbia Cross Roads. As Karen became interested in developing her own farm-related business, she began thinking about making milk soap. Originally she wanted the product with sheep milk, but after learning that many people are allergic to sheep milk, she decided to try cow's milk

To learn the ancient art of soap making, Karen read lots of books, and searched out people who had actual soap making experience.

"I really had to dig out the old timers," Karen said.

After learning all she could from outside sources, Karen decided that it was time to give it a try

"I had a lot of bad batches when I started," she admits.

A bad batch could have many different things wrong. First, the soap might not harden properly, it might have lumps or be watery or runny

To make the soap, Karen brings in raw milk from the farm and mixes it with lye and other natural ingredients, depending on what "flavor" she wishes to develop.

"The milk makes it more gentle In some of the old-time recipes that didn't use milk, you couldn't handle it for four weeks because the lye had to cure or neutralize. But with the milk, I can handle it the next day," she explained

The process is time consuming, and she must be very careful not to scorch the milk when adding it to the hot lye. As the milk is poured into the lye, she beats the combination until all ingredients are blended.

"Because cow's milk is not naturally homogenized,I have to stir constantly so the mixture does not separate," she noted. I've had people look at my soap and marvel at how thick and rich it is. I think it's because it is whipped so long."

Both the milk mixture and the lye mixture must be the same temperature. After whipping the mixture, she pours it into a tub, for bars of soap, or molds to produce shapes from cows to turtles to angels. It takes a couple of hours before it gets the right temperature to pour it into the rectangular plastic tub that she uses to make bar soap. After pouring the mixture into the tubs, she wraps the tubs in quilts so the soap doesn't cool too quickly.

"If it cools too quickly, it separates," she said.

In about two days, it's ready to cut. Then it is placed on a shelf to dry completely. After drying for about three weeks, the soap is shaped, wrapped in white paper, decorated with a coordinating ribbons and labeled with the variety and, of course, the Willowmoor Farm name.

"Actually it takes more time to do the shaping and the wrapping than it does to make the soap!" exclaims Karen.

Each batch has over two quarts of milk. For scents she uses natural oils, real fruits, flowers, and herbs.

Over time, Karen has developed recipes including "chocolate milk," with a chocolate-mint fragrance; "peaches and cream with oatmeal," which is especially soothing, strawberries and cream, a refreshing astringent soap, "cows in the corn," also an astringent soap that contains cornmeal for gentle facial scrubbing; and "Purple cow," an abrasive soap especially good for gardeners' hands.

Other varieties include an extra gentle variety called "baby moo," a basic soap called "utterly butterly," a skin softening formula entitled "milk and honey, and a kitchen odor eliminating soap called "cow pie."

Sue tried to keep all the names cow related She even has a soap for man's best friend, called "cow dog," which promises to repel fleas and other insects while leaving the coats shiny and smooth.

No doubt Karen makes use o plenty of this variety as she manages her other business, a dog grooming enterprise.

Besides distributing brochures, touting her products and maintaining her website, Karen also spends many weekend hours at craft shows. Customers include people of all ages who enjoy the fact that the product is all natural.

"I almost didn't go to the Old Timer's Day (a local festival that celebrates days gone by) because I'd hear people say, 'grandmother used to make that soap and it took your skin off' But it's not like the old-fashioned lye soap that a lot of the old-timers are thinking about. Actually as it turned out, I did better there at that show than I did at some of the other shows."

The modern soap that Karen makes is much more mild, she says, because of the milk. All of the products are tested by willing friends and family, who also make suggestions about the different varieties.

Karen also is thankful for the people who help market the product.

"My husband's sister teaches in Connecticut. When she was in school all last year, she'd send me a $100 order per week. So I mailed a lot out of state. Then I have a lady in Massachusetts who has a homemade ice cream-stand at her farm, and she sells soap there too," Karen said.

Her New England connections were made while growing up in that area.

"We moved here in November of 1993 from Connecticut. My husband had farmed with his dad. We were going to try to lease that farm, but it cost more to lease a farm up there, than it did to buy one down here," said Karen.

With the help of friends, they found this farm and continued the farming venture.

Karen plans to continue her milksoap craft for as long as possible, bringing an ancient art to life once again. Karen Coulter can be contacted via phone at (570) 297-2728, or on the web at milksoap@sosbbs.com.

Karen Coulter cuts a batch of cooled milksoap after it has cured. After cutting, she carefully wraps each bar with paper, a colored ribbon, and her own special label. Her son, Kevin, enjoys helping his mom with the finished product.

Varieties from chocolate to strawberry to cows in the corn, Karen Coulter has experimented with many different ingredients to make her milksoap special. Each variety has its own special property.

Grange Members Demonstrate Love With ABC Quilts

PHILADELPHIA — The community service work performed annually by members of the Pennsylvania State Grange touch so many people in so many ways.

But none of the projects has as much an impact than the nearly 800 ABC quilts that are made each year for at-risk babies. At-risk babies are those who are infected with the HIV virus, are born drug or alcohol addicted or have been abandoned and placed in foster care.

"This project is more than just another community service project, it is a demonstration of love and affection for individuals who probably aren't going to live a long life," State Grange Master (President) Bill Steel said. "That is why the Pennsylvania State Grange became involved in this project more than 10 years ago."

Although the Pennsylvania State Grange is a predominantly rural organization, the effects of its community service—like the ABC quilts—can be felt in cities across the Commonwealth

In cooperation with the Delaware Valley Area office of ABC quilts, the State Grange recently distributed about 200 quilts to be used in the Philadelphia area. Of those 200 quilts, 50 were delivered to St Christopher's Hospital in Northeast Philadelphia

"Quilts are distributed in all eight Grange regions across the state, and some even end up in other states," Steel said.

Pennsylvania State Grange Women's Activities Director Becky Michalka said quilts are placed in shelters for abused women and children, the neonatal units of hospitals and foster homes. The State Grange became involved with this project because it involves ill babies who need the touch from an invisible, but loving, hand.

"Our members never get to meet the children for whom the quilts are being made," Michalka said. "But there is immense satisfaction knowing that you've bought some comfort to the lives of children who have suffered so much in a short period of time."

Other projects sponsored by the Women's Activities Department include: stuffed toys (about 8,000 annually) for abused and hurt children; hats and booties for "preemie" babies; caps and mittens for homeless children; personal care items/bags for women's shelters; adult bibs, lap robes, walker saddlebags and wheelchair caddies for nursing homes; and finger separators for stroke and arthritis victims.

For more information about the community service work of the Pennsylvania State Grange or to receive items made by Grangers, call (717) 234-5001.

Ag Symposium In Altoona

ALTOONA (Blair Co) — Farmers and agribusiness are invited to attend a multi-accredited "Ag Symposium" Nov. 16 at The Casino here at Lakemont Park

The symposium is being organized by the Blair County Conservation District in cooperation with the Blair County Cooperative Extension Service as a way to bring valuable information and needed continuing education credits close to home.

The meeting will be from 9:30 a.m. to 3:15 p.m. Two different concurrent sessions are offered each hour. Those attending can pick and choose which sessions to attend.

The first two sessions are "Spray Drift Management," which will offer two pesticide core credits, presented by William Hoffman of the Pesticide Education Program of Penn State, and "Alternative Enterprises for Traditional Farms," presented by Commercial Horticulture Extension Agent Steve Bogash.

Both sessions will go from 9:30 a.m. - 10:30 a.m. – attendees will need to choose one. Following a break in which there will be time for people to talk one on one with the presenters or visit the business displays, the second session will begin at 11 a.m.

A multi-accredited session on "Biotechnology–Manipulating Plants to Benefit Farmers and Society," will be presented by Steve Ferrara of the Monsanto Company Also at 11 a.m. will be a presentation on "Farmers and the Internet and Using the Financial Analysis Computer Program – Finpack." This will be presented by Farm Management Extension Agent Michael Harteis.

Following a luncheon prepared by The Casino, a CCA and nutrient management accredited session will be presented by Dr. Rick Stehouwer from the Penn State on "Using Biosolids on the Farm." Also following lunch will be a program on "Farm Estate Planning," presented by financial consultants Allan Hancock, Jeff Fleming, and John Forney with The Hancock Group, Inc.

The final two sessions will be "Biosecurity in Dairy Herds" and "Managing Agricultural Phosphorus for Production and Water Quality." Dr. Andrew Sharpley, soil scientist for USDA and ARS Pasture Systems Watershed Management Research Lab, will present the multi-accredited session on phosphorus. Dr. David Wolfgang, director of field investigations with the Pennsylvania Animal Diagnosis Laboratory System at Penn State, will review the principles of controlling the spread of infectious disease between groups of animals.

We Breed Champions, Too!

Well, we really don't "breed" them, but we feel each mixer that we produce is a champion in every way. We take great care in designing each machine before it is built. We also track each machine after it leaves our facility, making sure it is delivered to you on time, and ready to go to work the minute it is off the truck. We then follow the life of the Mixer, making sure that the customer is happy with the machine, long after the sale. If you want a company that takes as much pride in their product as we know you do in yours, give us a call.

On The Mark, Get Set, Grow!

The 6100 Series Rigid And Vertical Fold Planters.

Precision farming starts with precision seed placement. And that's exactly what you'll get with the White 6100 Series planters. Our pull-type planters feature an exclusive air-metering system that's designed to singulate every seed. Its low air pressure, edge-drop seed discs and short, 18" seed drop ensure precise seed placement for maximum germination.

Adaptable To Any Tillage Situation.

Our 4, 6, 8 and 12 row planters have the flexibility to meet most tillage practices both now and in the future. They're built rugged with a massive 7" x 7" frame and strong, welded-tongue design to handle the demands of heavy residue. Add a 6900 splitter attachment for interplant capability.

This season get the planter that places each seed where it'll grow the best — and perform the best. Stop by your AGCO® White Planter dealer today.

Wet & matted hay & stoney fields?? VICON cuts less than an inch from ground & floats over stones, making hay mowing a breeze!

DISC MOWER CONDITIONERS

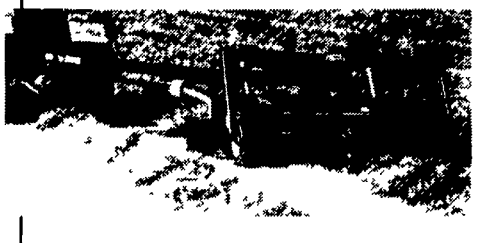
Free Float Suspension System

The overhead frame design with the mower suspended by links and coil springs allows cutting close to the ground The mower floats over uneven ground contours without damaging the stubble or unsettling the machine When encountering uneven field conditions, the mower unit lifts and swings back at the same time, reducing impact on the mowerbar

2 yr. Warranty on Cutter Bar

CUTTING CLOSE TO THE GROUND WITH THE VICON'S FREE FLAT SUSPENSION SYSTEM

Vicon finger or roller type trailed mower conditioners combine a superb cut with an excellent conditioning performance The full swivel hitch allows mowing and conditioning non-stop around the tightest corners and free float suspension system guarantees pertectly matched high capacity



No other machine on the market can match the performance or features of the Vicon KMR machine.

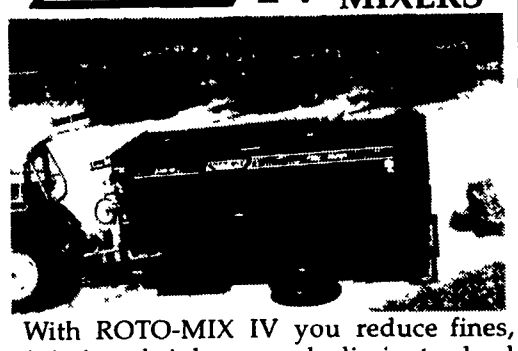
ROTO-MIX IV FEED MIXERS



With ROTO-MIX IV you reduce fines, minimize shrinkage, and eliminate dead spots. The gentle tumbling action mixes fragile flaked and high-moisture ingredients without grinding, resulting in a fluffier, more nutritional ration.

The ROTO-MIX end-to-end... side-to-side mixing system provides the most thorough TMR available, ensuring that your cattle will consume a balanced ration of nutrients in every pound of feed they eat.

COUNTDOWN TO YEAR 2000 FOR POULTRY PRODUCERS

Dennis E. Buffington
Department Of Agricultural And Biological Engineering

Everyone has heard about Y2K by this time, and how taking shortcuts years ago to preserve valuable computer memory has created the potential problems. This article will not delve into how and why the computer hardware and software systems were developed as they were, but rather will focus explicitly on what you need to do to prepare for any Y2K complications.

Some people are describing Y2K as the "millennium bug," "apocalypse," or "Y2-Chaos." Others are describing it as "much ado about nothing." It is certainly reassuring to note that we have made it through a number of Y2K-related "trigger dates" with no known difficulties or interruptions in services. The trigger dates already survived include April 10, 1999 (the 100th day of 1999), July 1, 1999 (first day of fiscal year 2000 for many companies and state governments), and Sept. 9, 1999 (999 — the stop code used on many old computer programs). Recently we've survived the additional trigger dates of Oct. 1, 1999 (first day of fiscal year 2000 for the federal government) and Oct. 10, 1999 (101099 — first date of 1999 with six digits).

Based on numerous reports and studies, utility companies (electricity, natural gas, telecommunications, and some water companies) have been addressing the Y2K-related problems since the mid-1990s. They have already demonstrated that they are fully prepared for the rollover to Year 2000. They will be continuing their testing programs and refining their established contingency plans from now until Jan. 1, 2000 and beyond.

Does this mean that you are guaranteed to have electricity for all phases of your poultry operations on January 1, 2000? No! But then there's no guarantee that you will have electricity or telephone service tomorrow or even later today. The utility companies are fully prepared for Y2K complications.

There is a huge risk to any person who totally ignores or underestimates the Y2K challenges. I want to emphasize that it has been legally determined that "Y2K is not an act of God," because Y2K is both predictable and avoidable. Therefore, you, your suppliers, customers, or employees cannot use the excuse that Y2K was "out of my hands because it was an act of God."

Most, if not all, large organizations such as utility companies, financial institutions, government agencies, and other businesses have already dealt with potential problems and are Y2K-ready. It appears as if problems will focus on smaller users and companies. You are highly encouraged to develop both an action plan and a contingency plan to prepare for any Y2K-related difficulties.

An action plan consists of the following five steps:

1. Conduct a complete inventory of your equipment and computer software.
2. Evaluate where there may be potential Y2K problems.
3. Prioritize your risks.
4. Communicate with your suppliers, customers, and employees about Y2K issues.
5. Take action now, not Dec. 15.

An appropriate checklist to use for developing the action plan includes:

- Computers — and not just the old ones. Many of the computers sold in 1999 are not Y2K compliant!
- Software — software failures will not be nearly as dramatic as hardware failures and may go undetected for weeks or longer. Carefully evaluate your software for accounting, payroll, flock management, nutrient management plans, etc.
- Automated systems — check the automation features of feed milling equipment, feeding and watering equipment, egg gathering and packing equipment, fan controllers, light controllers, and manure handling systems for Y2K compatibility.
- Production recording systems.
- Equipment with timers — check automated equipment, programmable control systems, generators, and any other equipment with electronics.

The question that I am asked most frequently is "How can I fix my computers?" That's actually the easy part about getting ready for Y2K. The answer is that you need to test and re-test your computer. If it is determined that your computer is not Y2K-compliant, then you need to either repair the computer, replace the computer, or retire the function(s) that the computer serves. Given the prices to repair computers today and the fact that computers become obsolete very quickly, in most cases it is advisable to replace any troublesome computers with new computers.

A contingency plan means simply a plan that you will follow in the event of any Y2K difficulties. I want to emphasize that your contingency plan for Y2K should not be much different than a contingency plan for coping with a really bad winter ice storm that takes down power lines and shuts down highway traffic. How have you coped in the past with such emergencies? How will you cope in the future with such weather-related emergencies? The recommendation from the American Red Cross is that you "prepare for Y2K as you would for a severe winter storm by keeping a supply of essential food, water, medicine, and other critical supplies."

Obviously you can't keep a supply of water for 200,000 layers. But you need to be prepared for the things that you can manage in anticipation of Y2K or a major winter storm. I believe that we will experience a nearly seamless transition into Year 2000 with respect to electricity, communications, transportation, and finance. So don't worry about these factors. Likewise, I am very confident that our cars, trucks, and tractors will work fine on January 1, 2000, assuming, of course, that we have fuel in the tanks.

The biggest potential hurdle to poultry farmers will be the embedded computer chips that are so prevalent in equipment today. The computer chips cannot be tested and the time cannot be advanced to check how the equipment would roll over into Year 2000. Even though these computer chips often are used just to provide time signals, sometimes the chips act as drivers for the functions of the equipment. For example, the automated equipment in a high-rise layer house may become inoperable just because one or several embedded computer chips serve as "the brain box" of the equipment.

What can you do? Ask very specific questions. Ask your equipment supplier if there are any manual over-rides of the brain box. Ask your equipment supply company if your equipment is Y2K compliant. If the answer is yes, ask for a statement in writing. If the answer is no, find out what the company is going to do to make the equipment Y2K compliant. Also make sure it is clearly stated who will pay for the necessary modifications to make the equipment compliant. Check equipment warranties and guarantees. Remember that "Y2K is not an act of God."

Communicate as soon as possible with all your suppliers, customers, and employees concerning Y2K issues. Suppliers include those companies and individuals responsible for supplying feed, fuel, equipment, and machinery. Suppliers also provide services such as veterinary, hauling, and maintenance. If a supplier tells you that "Y2K is a big pile of baloney and that you have absolutely nothing to worry about," then you want to check for a different supplier.

Communicate with your integrator if you are a contract poultry farmer. If you are an independent, be sure to communicate with your suppliers and your customers concerning any potential Y2K concerns. Lastly, don't forget to communicate with your employees, including full-time and part-time workers, seasonal workers, and family members (paid and unpaid).

Kee Agriculture-Athletic Scholarship

NEWARK, Del. — The first joint agricultural and athletic scholarship at the University of Delaware (Md.) was announced recently by the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Given by Ed Kee, UD Cooperative Extension specialist for vegetables, the scholarship will be awarded to a Delaware high school graduate. A student participating in an inter-collegiate sport will receive first consideration.

Kee said he and his wife, Debbie, also a UD graduate, will contribute $25,000 over the next five years to endow this scholarship.

"The university's Capital Campaign focused our attention on how grateful we have been to the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, which has been such an amazing part of my life for so many reasons — first as a student, and now as a professional. Debbie and I wanted to encourage some young person to look at how much this college has to offer, and then to help that person pay their bills."

Kee said he and his family have been fans of the university athletics for as long as he can remember.

"My dad started taking me to UD football and basketball games when I was just a little kid," said Kee. "It was just something we did together."

"When we decided to give a scholarship to the college, we thought about our personal ties to university sports and realized how few athletes major in agriculture and related fields. By linking agriculture to athletics, we hope to bring some diversity to the college and to raise interest in all the opportunities in agriculture among some students who may never have considered the field."

Choosing a career in agriculture was a good decision for Kee, he said. He traces his earliest interest in farming and food production to New Castle County where he grew up. While he lived in a typical World War II housing development in town, his dad worked as a food purchaser in the Hotel DuPont.

"Dad would take me along when he brought produce, meats and seafood, and it just intrigued me," he recalled. "How could a box of apples come all the way from Washington, I would wonder. I thought it was so neat!"

By the time Kee was a teenager, he was working on a farm. At UD he majored in plant and soil sciences, earning a bachelor's degree in 1973 and a master's in 1975.

"My greatest influence in the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources was Dr. Vernon Fisher, who is now retired and living in California," said Kee. "He and I had a very special teacher-student relationship. We really hit it off. When I was in my senior year, he had an opening in grad school, and he offered it to me. That opportunity made a huge difference to me professionally because of the doors it opened afterward."

Kee worked as farm manager for Nassau Orchards outside Lewes, Del., before signing on as Kent County agricultural extension agent in 1978. He moved into his current position as extension specialist for vegetable crops in 1982, working out of the UD Research and Education Center in Georgetown.

"My background at the college, followed by my working as a farm manager and then as county agent, couldn't have scripted me better to be the Extension vegetable specialist in Delaware," said Kee.

In addition to working with farmers throughout the state, Kee has been interacting with the agricultural industry since the early 1970s. When J.G. Townsends, Jr. & Co., a family-owned, Delaware-based farming, timber, and vegetable-processing company in Georgetown, learned of Kee's scholarship, they pledged a total of $100,000 in the next five years.

"I was speechless the day vice president Roger Townsend called me about this," said Kee. "He said 'Our company has worked with university folks for three generations now, and this is an opportunity to say thank you.'"

"When my dad took me to all those ball games years ago, he would always say, 'I don't know why anyone would ever go to school anywhere else when UD is the greatest place!'

"My dad is 78 now and still feels the same way," said Kee "So do I."

Tire Is Option On Utility Vehicle

AKRON, Ohio — Today's cornfields with their sturdier stalks can be minefields for utility vehicle tires. In fact, farms in general can pose many risks for punctures

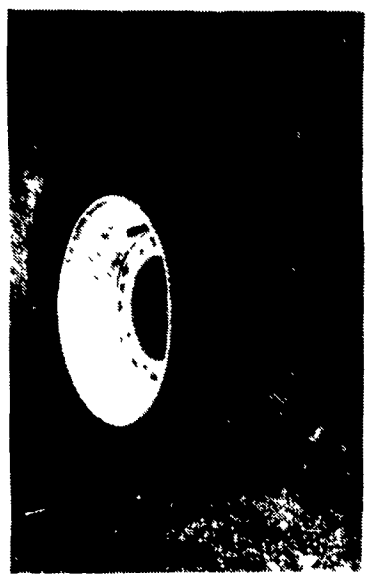
That's why John Deere is offering Goodyear's run-flat all-terrain vehicle tire as an original equipment option on its four- and six-wheel Gator utility vehicles It is the first time Goodyear's run-flat ATV tire – the Tracker P Extended Mobility Tire (EMT) – has been available as an OE option The Tracker P EMT is the only run-flat ATV tire on the market.

"Farms can present many hazards for tires; yet farmers, particularly in the spring and fall, cannot afford to be stuck in the middle of a field with a flat tire on their utility vehicles," said Tim Rooney of Advanced Engineering ATV Tire Design. "That's why the Tracker P EMT run-flat tire is such a natural fit for the Gator."

While the John Deere Gator utility vehicle is becoming a more common sight on farms, the utility vehicle has applications in off-road, commercial and residential environments as well. The six-wheeled vehicles, which come with either standard gas or diesel engines, have cargo beds that can hold up to 1,000 pounds.

"These are rugged machines used by people who work and play hard," said Tim Watts, Goodyear Applications Engineer of John Deere "As such, they require a tire that can stand up to tough conditions."

The Tracker P EMT is capable of driving at least 50 miles at the utility vehicle's top speed after a complete loss of air. The reinforced sidewalls have been shown to hold up even after 2-inch holes were drilled into the side of the tire



Goodyear's Tracker P EMT is being offered as an original equipment option on John Deere's Gator utility vehicles. It is the first time the run-flat ATV tire has been available as an OE option.

Asgrow Announces Product Line Prices

ST LOUIS, Mo. — Low commodity prices have prompted Asgrow to lower prices for technology-enhanced seed and hold other prices steady for 2000.

Asgrow Brand Manager Trent Leopold announced a strong pricing and financing package aimed at helping farmers remain profitable into the new millennium.

"We have witnessed firsthand how low commodity prices have impacted crop producers, and we wanted to do our part to help keep input costs down," Leopold said.

A new pricing structure will lower prices for Asgrow's Roundup Ready® soybeans, YieldGard® corn, and Roundup Ready corn. "We know our technology helps farmers improve profit margins," said Leopold. "We wanted to offer this seed at an increased value to help growers adopt this powerful technology."

Asgrow will be offering growers special financing through extended terms and a very attractive early-cash program for 2000. "All of the financing and the new pricing structure focus on lowering input costs for farmers," said Leopold

Asgrow is releasing a record number of new corn hybrids and soybean varieties for 2000.

Still active at Penn State, Sattazahn was named the 1999 Penn State young dairy leader, alumni relations chairperson for Alpha Zata Fraternity, vice president of Penn State Dairymen's Club, and a charter board member on the Pennsylvania Governor's School for Excellence Alumni Board. Sattazahn is also a 1999-2000 Holstein Foundation Young Dairy Leader Institute class member.

In his spare time, Sattazahn enjoys working with his own herd of 18 Holstein cattle at his family's farm in Womelsdorf.

Swartley will be responsible for the care of the bulls, semen collection, and maintenance of the facilities at the main production and mini-stud facilities.

Swartley grew up on his parents' dairy farms in Bucks and Bradford counties. After high school, he was a herdsman for a 125-cow dairy for three years. He attended Delaware Valley College, where he earned a bachelor's degree in dairy science. For the last 10 years, Swartley has been a sire programs consultant for Sire Power.

MDS Becomes Manufacturer's Rep.

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Manufacturer's Diversified Services (MDS) has announced that it has become the manufacturer's representative for Rockaway.

Rockaway was designed and built by a user who was frustrated by the cost of replacing chains and slats on a popular rock-picking unit. Rockaway is not a self-contained attachment, but one that easily pins onto customer's existing skid-steer buckets.

This is a unique, high-quality soil preparation device that is adaptable to almost any skid-steer loader.

Here are some of its benefits:

• One rotor, equipped with carbide-tipped mining teeth, does all the work and provides years of productive service.

• Teeth are spiral-mounted on the rotor to pull material toward the center, helping avoid dirt trails.

• Low maintenance – just two greasable bearings and one chain.

• Fits any utility, high-capacity, or low-profile skid-steer bucket with widths from 60 to 73 inches.

• Easy to install on your existing loader buckets and easy to remove – just two pins and two hoses.

• The same Rockaway can be used on several different buckets.

Hookup is a snap. Just attach the Rockaway to your skid-steer bucket with two, high-strength pins through two holes torched in the side plates. After the Rockaway has been installed on the skid steer, lower the bucket to the ground and tilt it forward. No down pressure is needed on the bucket.

Engage the rotor and begin backing up with the skid steer, slowly, so that rocks and dirt can be processed completely. The bucket should be about half full for efficient operation. At this point, dirt and rocks are processed together through the rotor. The dirt clumps are broken up, leaving only rocks in the bucket. Dirt, fine enough for seeding, passes through the rotor and out the back of the Rockaway screen.

There are three models for three bucket-width ranges. The 670 Rockaway version fits 60 to 66.5-inch buckets. The 690 version is for 62 to 68.5-inch buckets. The largest version is 740 wide fits 68 to 73.5-inch buckets.

Pioneer: New Opportunities As Part Of DuPont

DES MOINES, Iowa — Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., will continue to provide top-performing seed and service to farmers while playing a key role in DuPont's vision of generating value from renewable energy sources, said the new Pioneer President and Chief Executive Officer Jerry Chicoinc, after Pioneer shareholders approved the company's merger with DuPont.

"Today is opening day for a new era of looking to nature — with great respect — to discover and develop opportunities to enrich lives through plant genetics," said Chicoine.

"I don't think anyone can fully comprehend the expanded possibilities our combined efforts will bring to the marketplace, but they will be tremendous.

"Our immediate attention lies with our customers. Along with the Pioneer name and brand, our commitment to serving them will remain in the countryside. We are very focused on serving farmers and doing what we can to help them prepare for the year ahead," said Chicoinc.

The merger was approved recently at a special Pioneer shareholders' meeting It brings together the most successful genetic improvement company in the history of the world with the world leader in turning science into useful products for consumers

"Pioneer and DuPont will be assembling the strongest research and product development program in the world agricultural marketplace. This will allow us to offer farmers products that meet specific consumer demands for improved products that are made in earth-friendly processes," said Chicoine.

The two companies already have a common culture, which includes a customer focus on choice, enhanced product value and new market development, said Richard Goodmanson, DuPont executive vice president and chief operating officer. "We share a vision in which we deliver high-value products to the feed, food, and biomaterials markets. Neither company could fully develop that vision alone. Together we can deliver the miracles of science," said Goodmanson.

"Our vision includes putting the needs of our customers first. We can be successful only if our customers are successful. We will use science and knowledge and our commitment to safety to create more opportunities in the industry and high value products for consumers."

DuPont Chairman and CEO Charles O. Holliday recently announced DuPont's goal of deriving 25 percent of its revenues by 2010 from renewable energy resources. This focus includes providing customers expanded choices and markets in plant technology and increasing the use of knowledge and service to create consumer value.

As a DuPont company, Pioneer will continue to operate under the Pioneer name and will remain headquartered in Des Moines, Iowa. It has 5,000 employees worldwide. DuPont formerly had a 20 percent equity interest in Pioneer. DuPont will have full ownership of Pioneer following the transaction.

Drivers Beware: More Deer Cross Roadways In Fall

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — As the breeding and hunting seasons for white-tailed deer approach, more deer will be crossing Pennsylvania highways, said a wildlife biologist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"During the breeding season — which ranges from October to December but peaks in November — bucks often seem to lose their intelligence and their fear of roads," said Gary San Julian, professor of wildlife resources. "Interested in finding fertile females, they'll often run across roads without even thinking about traffic. Also, does being chased by bucks often don't heed roads. Then, on November 29, more than 800,000 gun hunters will enter the woods and stir them up even more.

"PennDOT and individual contractors pick up about 45,000 deer from the state's highways each year," San Julian said. "Many more get hit and go off into the woods to die. Last year, Pennsylvania drivers killed more deer on highways than West Virginia hunters killed during their gun season."

Drivers are most likely to see deer at dawn and dusk, San Julian said. "They're moving out of the woods and into the safety of the dark to feed. Because of the low light at those times, deer also are much harder to see, so it's important to slow down. It's very easy to get hurt when you're driving 60 miles per hour and a 150-pound deer comes flying through the windshield. Some people have been killed."

"You should be especially vigilant in areas where you've seen deer in the past," he said. "In high deer areas, high beams will help you see the deer's eye shine And remember, if you see one deer, often more will be following behind."

If you hit a deer, San Julian recommends that you stop to see if the deer is still alive. "If you have a cell phone or can get to a phone, call a wildlife enforcement officer through the regional office that covers that county," he said. "Phone numbers for wildlife enforcement officers can be found under 'Wildlife Conservation Officer' or 'Pennsylvania Game Commission' in the phone book."

In Pennsylvania, residents can pick up road-killed deer, but they must apply to the game commission within 24 hours for a free permit to keep deer "Call the Game Commission's regional office for an application," San Julian said.

"Wildlife officers sometimes pick up recently killed deer and donate them to charities," he said. "They're interested in getting some use from the animals, if possible."

Drivers also see a lot of young deer in the springtime, when does force yearlings out to make room for new fawns, San Julian said. "But fall is definitely the biggest time, because of the reproductive activity and hunters"

Preventive Management Is Best Medicine

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — The best way to ensure healthy dairy calves is to have a comprehensive herd health program, stressing "preventative" management through sanitation, observation, preparation and appropriate vaccination of the cow herd. Providing a clean, disinfected, well-bedded, well-ventilated, but draft-free environment for calving is critical for delivering and maintaining healthy calves. As well, fresh cow health will benefit.

According to statistics compiled by the National Animal Health Monitoring System, 54 percent of U.S. dairy producers allow two or more calvings to occur in a maternity area before cleaning it. Accumulated waste is a reservoir for the buildup and spread of disease at a time when the cow and calf are most vulnerable. Ideally, cows should calve in separate pens that are cleaned and disinfected between each calving.

Newborn calves are not born with active immunity. The first 24 hours of life are critical – not only because the calf has limited protection against disease, but also because the cellular structures of the lower intestine are still maturing, giving viral and bacterial agents easy access to the bloodstream. Dirty calving areas also contribute to uterine and other infections in the fresh cow.

Nationally, the pre-weaned mortality rate is 11 percent in dairy calves. The compares with 4 percent calf mortality in the beef industry. On the dairy farm, milk is the main product. Thus, substantial time and resources are devoted to the care of the lactating animals on the farm. For beef cow/calf producers, the calves themselves are the primary crop. A mindset that is more focused on calving may account for the large percentage of difference between calf mortality in dairy cow herds compared with that of beef cow herds.

Healthy calves are the result of a conscious, planned effort on the part of the producer. The heifer calf crop of the dairy industry is its very future But all dairy calves have value. Strong, healthy bull calves are the basis of the veal industry which purchases not only starter animals, but also feed ingredients, from the dairy industry.

When planning a renovation or expansion project, use the opportunity to improve the calving environment. Ideally, maternity pens should be located in a building designed for calving use only, away from hospital pens, but easily accessible for observation and assistance. It should be close to, but not part of, the dry cow lot for easy transfer of springing animals. Youngstock should be housed upwind and upslope from other livestock housing. One calving pen for every 25 cows should be provided for year-round calving. For more concentrated seasonal calving, one pen for every 10 cows is recommended.

Dry air and adequate ventilation promote good health. Disease organisms thrive in humid environments and travel through the air on moisture droplets. Excessive air moisture leads to condensation when temperatures shift from day to night. A sign that ventilation may need improving is the appearance of frost on the underside of the roof. Accumulated moisture that drips on bedding and livestock can cause respiratory and other health problems.

If outdoor calving areas are provided, make sure there is plenty of access to water, adequate pasture quality and quantity, shade and shelter. Clean separate paddocks between calvings and rotate fenced areas between calving groups to reduce the potential for germ buildup and exposure.

Move outdoor springers, particularly the heifers, where they can easily and frequently observed during the normal course of the day and from the house at night. Heifers have the highest rate of abnormal births, so keep a closer eye on them and their newborns. Depending on the size of the herd, labor force and building site layout, monitoring of inside maternity pens can be enhanced with the use of closed-circuit video cameras.

While not every producer has the opportunity to make such a building, location or technological improvements, every producer has the ability to focus more attention on the cleaning, disinfecting and observation of the calving environments they do provide.

Make it a priority check on springers often, not just to assist with difficult deliveries, but also to make sure the calf is mothered immediately after birth. Newborn calves can quickly become chilled, even in moderate temperatures. If the dam does not show interest within the first few minutes, spend 10 to 15 minutes towel rubbing or blow drying the calf to dry and fluff the coat. This will minimize heat loss and stimulate circulation.

The best vaccination for the calf is high quality colostrum from the cow. Work closely with the herd veterinarian to develop a vaccination program that will improve immune status and colostrum quality. Newborn bull calves should not be vaccinated because they will either be sold for meat as "bob veal," or purchased by special fed veal growers or dairy beef producers who will vaccinate them within 12 hours of sale.

Bull calves should be kept in the dairy farm for at least three days to one week. Keep them longer if they weigh less than 95 pounds, have a wet navel or are unable to walk unassisted. During this time, limit access to older animals in the herd to limit the transfer of disease or parasites. Provide free choice water and watch for signs of dehydration in extreme temperatures. Check and record health status at least twice daily.

Keep records of calf health and medication use, including withdrawal times. Avoid treating dairy bull calves unless absolutely necessary, and then use only a short withdrawal product and only the recommended dosage. Withdrawal must be observed on all treated calves before marketing because the calf may enter the food system if it is not purchased by a special fed veal producer or beef grower.

For more information about the veal quality assurance program and dairy calf management, contact (717) 985-9125, or write American Veal Association, 1500 Fulling Mill Rd., Middletown, PA 17057. This information is provided by the Veal Quality Assurance Program, which is administered by the American Veal Association and funded by beef, dairy and veal producers through the $1 per head checkoff program, and was produced for the Cattlemen's Beef Board by the National Cattlemen's Beef Association.

Country Singer Raises Voice For Youth

NEWFOUNDLAND (Wayne Co.) — Along with business and friends, country singer Leroy VanDyke supported the youth at the Southern Wayne Livestock Sale by volunteering his services as auctioneer, along with local auctioneer Wayne Weaver who volunteers for youth every fair season.

As in years past, Waymart Milling Company was volume bidder in both dollars spent and in animals purchased during the September sale.

This year's grand champion and reserve hogs were raised by Nick Nebzydoski of the Pleasant Mount Go-Getters. Both the 248-pound grand champion and the 247-pound reserve were purchased by Waymart Milling for $3.50 and $2.20 per pound, respectively.

Dana MacDonald sold his 131-pound grand champion market lamb to Dr. Henry Nebzydoski for $3 per pound. The reserve was raised by Ryan Keyes and was successfully bid to $1.70 per pound by Honesdale National Bank.

Sara Swingle exhibited the grand champion market steer and sold the 1,285 pound animal to Honesdale National Bank for $1.25 per pound. Heather Yedinak's 1,055 pound market steer sold for 46 cents per pound and was purchased by Darling Locker Plant.

Animals were donated back for resale to benefit organizations and individuals. Honesdale National Bank resold their animals with proceeds of the resale going to the G.D.S. Fair Association and the Southern Wayne Junior Livestock Sale. Art Noble returned his market animal to sell for the Wayne County 4-H Scholarship Fund. John and Susan Keyes donated their market lamb for resale to benefit the medical fund of Lisa DaBresia. Dr. Henry returned the grand champion market lamb to be sold a second time to benefit the Green-Dreher-Sterling Fair Queen Pageant. Carroll and Dawn Krautter donated a feeder beef calf to sell for the medical fund of Rob Thorpe of the Waymart Milling Company family.

Everlast Roofing

Everlast II is galvanized heavier like old times; it is heat formed to prevent paint cracks; it is cut while hot to prevent early edge rust; Everlast paint is harder so it won't scratch as easy; won't bend or buckle as easy because of stronger design; laps are tighter and virtually invisible, nails/screws seal better because ribs fit tighter to fastener heads; zinc phosphate is used under paint which is much better than the chromate most competitors use. Crisp and attractive. Sharp colors. Excellent for houses and barns. Double dipped galvanized is proven best for animals. Standing seam is ideal for houses. Low prices, fast delivery

Everlast Roofing, Inc, 239 N. 5th Ave., Lebanon, PA 17046, Call toll free 1-888-339-0059 for info. & nearest dealer. (Mid-Atlantic, New England, Ohio)

Attention
Dairy, Swine & Poultry Producers!

New Products Now Available...

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer these products to meet your nutritional needs. Manufacturing these products ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

GOLDEN PRO 46 XP

This natural, mechanically extruded and expelled soybean product is experiencing great acceptance with local dairymen. A course golden colored meal with a 6% fat content, Golden Pro 46 XP is extremely palatable Golden Pro 46 XP is a natural way to bring the value of high by-pass protein into diets that require a lower fat level.

GOLDEN MEAL 40

An 18 percent fat content along with a 40 percent crude protein makes this mechanically extruded meal product a valuable component in a variety of rations. Full fat content gives you a high level of digestible energy, while high temperature extruding ruptures the oil cells for better nutritional absorbtions.

CRUDE SOYBEAN OIL

A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. A natural alternative to animal fats, this oil provides needed energy in various rations.

To make these products available, and to help you utilize your home raised soybeans Keystone Mills announces its

Soybean Exchange Program

As manufacturers and distributers of Golden Pro 46 XP and Golden Meal 40, we are anxious for you to try our products. We are offering a soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products.

OUR STUDENTS DESERVE THE BEST RIGHT?

The best administrators, teachers, and materials can provide the best opportunity for a fine education Few would argue with this But this cannot happen for most students if they don't have daily transportation That's the problem! There is a serious nationwide shortage of school bus drivers, and that shortage is also right here

Our drivers are skilled, dedicated professionals who care about their student riders, find daily interaction with them rewarding, and take pride in safely performing this essential job They strive to be the best, but we don't have enough of them

FARM FAMILIES, retirees, , shift/flexible time workers, seasonal employed, self-employed, housewives/husbands, undecided career changers, or those looking for a new direction-please consider this vital service

What you get morning and/or afternoon assignments (we're flexible), average 3 to 4 hours daily with free time for yourself, optional extra assignments, no nights or weekends, same holidays and vacations as school students, summers off, incentive bonuses, health insurance available, company-paid training, travel program benefit

Call Red Lion Bus Company today to learn more about opportunities for you on our team
